

Federal Agents Seeking Score of Suspected Spies

Special Agents Receive Instructions in New York

SECRECY PREVAILS

No Statement to be Made 'Until Case Is Complete'

New York — (AP)—By plane and train, G-men fanned out across the nation today in quest of a score or more new suspects in a highly-organized spy ring which pried into United States army and navy secrets for cash from an unnamed European power.

Reed Vetterli, head of the New York office of the federal bureau of investigation, clamped down a strict silence on apparently fast-growing ramifications of the plot which broke last week with the arrest of two soldiers and a red-haired German woman.

Special agents gathered at the F. B. I. headquarters here last night and received "sealed" instructions from Vetterli.

The destinations of the G-men, setting out to track down other alleged members of the combine, could not be ascertained.

"I cannot discuss the case now," Vetterli told reporters. "No statement of any kind will be made until the case is complete."

Guard Increased

Meanwhile, as Colonel Thomas Hanley tightened the guard at the big United States army base at Mitchell Field, Long Island, where valuable air corps secrets allegedly were stolen by the conspirators, United States District Attorney Lamarr Hardy promised swift jury action against the three prisoners seized last week.

Held incommunicado after arraignment and in $25,000 bond each on espionage charges, they were listed as:

Erastine Johanna Hoffman, 26, a German citizen and native of Dresden, Germany, employed as a manicurist-hairdresser on the North German Lloyd liner Europa, accused by federal agents of being the "payoff" agent for the foreign nation.

Gunter Gustave Rummich, 27, German-educated American citizen, a former United States army sergeant, once stationed in the Panama Canal Zone, and Erich Glasat, 28, a private in the 18th Reconnaissance squadron, stationed at Mitchell field, air defense center for New York city.

Complete Confession

Vetterli said Rummich made a complete confession, including the theft of highly confidential data on Atlantic coast artillery defenses and the mobilization plan for defending the Panama Canal Zone.

Federal agents broke the case when they trapped Rummich in an attempt to obtain a batch of American passports, allegedly for fraudulent use of a European nation's secret agents in entering Soviet Russia.

Vetterli said Rummich impersonated Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a telephone conversation with the local passport bureau, demanding that the blanks be sent to his hotel. A G-man disguised as a messenger delivered the blanks and promptly arrested Rummich.

Sought Added Data

Vetterli said Rummich confessed he received $50 a month for his work, that some parts of the plot originated in Germany, and that the former army sergeant admitted he was "in the process" of trying to purloin secret designs of two super-modern United States navy aircraft carriers.

Fraulein Hoffman, Vetterli said, had in her possession a coded letter offering $1,000 for information on the construction of the aircraft carriers Enterprise and Yorktown.

Vetterli said she also had a coded list betraying the identity of New York espionage agents who were paid for American military information already transmitted to the European nation.

"Millions of cautions" have restricted private spending despite vast credit resources, Bernard Baruch (above), New York financier, told the senate's unemployment committee. He declared that employment could not be expected to increase until there was a feeling of security among business men.

Senate and House Groups Disagree On Relief Issue

At Odds Over How Money Shall be Spent by Government

Washington — (AP)—Disagreement between house and senate over how relief money should be spent again marked the administration's $250,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill in a joint house-senate committee today.

Senate conferees refused to accept a house-imposed requirement for spreading the money over the next four months with no provision for meeting any new emergency that arises.

Senator Adams (D-Colo.) said the stand of the senate committee members meant the matter would have to be brought before the entire senate, possibly this afternoon.

Meanwhile, the senate took up the administration's long-delayed government reorganization bill, with the prospect of a three-weeks fight that is expected to widen the breach between administration and anti-administration Democrats in the senate.

On the house side Speaker Bankhead announced the new tax revision bill, to be introduced by the ways and means committee tomorrow after months of work, would be debated 12 hours before amendments were considered.

Sees Week's Study

Bankhead predicted a week's study of the measure, saying "probably."

Butternut Robber On Witness Stand

Implicates Defendant in Trial in Federal Court At Superior

Superior — (AP)—A jury heard Edward Zblewski, Stevens Point, confessed robber of the Butternut station of the Ashland State bank, last September, testify as government witness in federal court here Monday in the trial of Leo Lepinski, Polonia, charged with the same crime.

Zblewski started testimony Saturday and left the stand today. He testified that Lepinski, himself, Frank Lemanski, Polonia, and Albert Czerwinski were under the influence of intoxicating liquor to a "noticeable state" at the time of the crime, and linked all four.

Czerwinski and Lemanski, Zblewski testified, took no part in the actual robbery.

The witness testified Lepinski gave him $150 as his share of the loot, and later this $150 disappeared.

Saturday afternoon William John, cashier of the bank, testified on the course of the robbery and the identity of the bandits.

A jury verdict late Saturday gave Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mayhew, Knapp, Wis., $7,000 damages incident upon the death of their son, Ralph, in a motorcycle automobile accident at Hammond, Wis., Sept. 11. Defendants were Frank DeVoe, Minneapolis, and the Phoenix Indemnity company.

Arrest Suspect as Robber Gang Chief

Prisoner Accused of Taking Part in 57 Iowa Robberies

Viroqua, Wis. — (AP)—Ernest McCullough, 22, formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, was in custody of Iowa Bureau of Investigation officers at Waterloo today as suspected leader of a gang responsible for 57 robberies.

Included among jobs charged against McCullough were the robberies by the Iowa bureau, Sheriff C. W. Fowell of Vernon county said, was a $1,731 theft at a Holland, Iowa, bank.

Fowell and a deputy Chester Elfritz, arrested McCullough on a farm near here yesterday.

McCullough was taken to Viroqua, and three officers of the Iowa bureau took him to Waterloo after they said he waived extradition. Two other men—Oscar Davis, 29, McCullough's uncle, and Chester Tippey, 28 — are in custody at Waterloo as suspected members of the gang, they said. McCullough denied the charges.

Wreckage Clue to Fate Of Missing Fishing Tug

Whitehall, Mich. — (AP)—Wreckage believed to have been from the fishing tug, Walter J. which vanished two months ago while en route from St. Ignace to Racine, Wis., was reported along the shore of Lake Michigan near here today. Fishermen from Whitehall reported they found boxes, buoys and pieces of net along the shore and they said they were convinced they were from the missing tug. A search was planned for further wreckage as soon as ice conditions improve. Aboard the tug when it disappeared were Walter Kadeau, 40, of Milwaukee, and his father, Herman, 80, and Chester St. Onge, 40, of St. Ignace.

Gen. Pershing Again Gaining, Doctors Find

Able to Take Fluids Through Mouth First Time in Four Days

CONSCIOUS LONGER

'Heart Still Competent' And 'Kidneys Functioning a Little'

Tucson, Ariz. — (AP)—General John J. Pershing, "definitely stronger" and "conscious most of the time," rallied so strongly this afternoon that Dr. Roland Davidson found the outlook "quite promising."

Tuesday, Ariz. — (AP)—The first bulletin from the bedside of General John J. Pershing today said he had taken fluids through the mouth for the first time in four days.

"Although General Pershing had a very restless night he seemed somewhat better this morning and took fluids by the mouth," said the bulletin given out by Dr. Roland Davidson.

"He has been conscious much longer periods. His body temperature has returned to almost normal level and the heart is still competent. No oxygen has been administered for 36 hours."

In reply to question, Dr. Davidson said the general's kidneys were "functioning a little now and that helped to relieve the uremic poisoning condition."

The report was a direct reversal of one released about 1 o'clock a. m. (2 o'clock a. m. C. S. T.) which said the courageous warrior was losing ground again in his endurance contest with many complications. At that time Dr. Davidson said General Pershing appeared tired and "I definitely feel he has lost ground."

Earlier Bulletin

This bulletin followed by four and one-half hours another that was optimistic and concluded with the statement: "We are more hopeful than we were last night."

Dr. Davidson, interpreting that bulletin for the press, explained why the doctors were more optimistic.

"The encouraging sign," he said, "is the strength of the general's Turn to page 2 col. 4

$1,200,000,000 to Be Needed Under Defense Program

Annual Bill Expected to Mount to That Figure Within Decade

Washington — (AP)—The nation's annual defense bill, informed officials predicted today, will mount inevitably in the next decade to $1,200,000,000 or more.

This would be double the $617,314,000 allotted in 1923, when the Washington arms limitation treaty first was effective, but would be well under the $1,744,000,000 spent in post-war 1920.

Exclusive of the increases which Mr. Roosevelt has recommended, prospective outlays for the army and navy this year aggregate about $1,000,000,000.

The chief factor in the future calculations is the $1,158,000,000 officially estimated as the cost of increasing the fleet's tonnage by 20 percent and augmenting the naval aviation force by 950 planes.

Would Require Years

It would be prorated over the six or eight years which the house naval committee has been told would be required to complete the program.

Other factors include increased cost of manning, repairing and fueling a larger fleet, and $18,000,000 for army anti-aircraft guns, ammunition and other purposes.

The navy figures it ultimately will need 20,000 or more sailors—in addition to the present 105,000 enlisted men—for the recommended 47 warships, 22 auxiliaries and 1,000 planes.

Prospects are that the defense bill will increase gradually. The first added outlays logically would be for shipbuilding facilities. Navy spokesmen have testified from $2-

Work Holiday 'Begun' At Milwaukee Plants

Milwaukee — (AP)—Full-fledged military workers at the Phoenix and Ioleproof plants here began a "work holiday" at noon today preliminary to deciding at a 3 o'clock p. m. meeting whether to join a strike of civilian locals of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers (CIO) protesting a wage reduction in the industry. John Banachowicz, president of the Milwaukee local, said the call involving 3,000 members, was not a "walkout" but that he asked workers to leave their jobs "in the friendliest of spirits toward the companies." Both companies had reported sporadic stoppages of work during the morning.

Eight Witnesses Called At Von Nobel Inquest

Marinette — (AP)—Eight witnesses were called to testify this afternoon at an inquest into the death of Henry Von Nobel and his third wife, Irma, in a Marinette hotel Feb. 15. Witnesses said Von Nobel, a self-styled German count, shot and killed his wife. And then mortally wounded himself 20 minutes before they were to go to court for a hearing of Mrs. Von Nobel's divorce suit. Coroner Robert Thompson is conducting the inquest.

Oshkosh Man Confesses Check Forgery Charges

Madison — (AP)—Robert Wilke, 28, of Oshkosh, pleaded guilty in Superior court today to charges of forgery. Detective Patrick J. Burke said Wilke admitted obtaining $412 by forging checks in Milwaukee, Madison, Fond du Lac and Neenah. When arrested, Wilke had on his person five checks totaling $106.40, signed with the name of P. B. Grove, Shorewood Hills, supervisor, Burke said. Wilke, Burke said, presented a check of $49.80 to a filling station attendant here Saturday and received $10, returning for the balance Sunday when he was arrested.

Seadlund Pleads Guilty; Trial to Open March 14

Chicago — (AP)—John Henry Seadlund pleaded guilty today in federal court to a charge of kidnapping the slain Charles S. Ross, retired Chicago greeting card manufacturer. Seadlund entered the guilty plea after Judge John P. Barnes overruled two motions by defense attorneys, one attacking validity of the indictment and the other challenging constitutionality of the Lindbergh kidnap law. Seadlund, handcuffed to deputy marshals, was led before the judge and muttered: "Guilty." Judge Barnes set the trial for March 14.

Nippon 'Has Defeated U. S. in Naval Building,' Japanese Admiral States

Tokio — (AP)—A leading Japanese naval authority asserted today that "America is unable to have anything like confidence in her navy's ability to cope with Japan because Japan has defeated the United States in naval building." The authority, Rear Admiral Tota Ishimaru, retired, considered one of Japan's foremost commentators on naval affairs, made this analysis of the sea power of the two countries in a new magazine article. The Japanese navy, he said, is superior in quality to the United States fleet now. He added that Japan has no need to fear a naval building race. A naval war, the retired admiral said, would be dangerous to Japan only if Great Britain were able to enlist both the United States and Russia in such a conflict.

Airplane Maker Urges Tests for New 'Aerial Bomb'

Washington — (AP)—Glen L. Martin, airplane manufacturer, told the house naval committee today the government should try out immediately a new "aerial mine" which its inventor claims will revolutionize aerial warfare. Representative Church (R-Ill.) received the Admiral William L. Leahy, chief of naval operations, had testified such a mine might render parts of a fleet inoperative. The weapon was invented by Lester P. Barlow of Stamford, Conn., a pioneer in aerial bombardment. "I'd give Barlow's device serious consideration," Martin said. "If it is successful, it will be pretty serious. It ought to have an immediate trial. It wouldn't cost much to try and it wouldn't take long." Martin said he was studying plans for a new 250,000-pound ship that could carry 4,000 pounds of bombs 11,000 miles at a speed of 380 miles an hour. The ship could be delivered, he said, in 34 years. Tests will have to be made to determine the actual "fighting power" of such a craft," he added.

Noted Former Editor Faces Firing Squad

20 Other Russians on Trial Wednesday in Renewal of Purge

ACCUSED OF MURDER

Newspaper Hints Maxim Gorky and Two Others Poisoned

Moscow — (AP)—The two leading Soviet newspapers, Pravda and Izvestia, both edited at various times by Nikolai Bucharin, indicated today that death awaited him and 20 others who are to go on trial Wednesday in the latest episode of Joseph Stalin's purge of enemies of his regime.

The stage was set for one of the most sensational of Russia's recent series of trials of fallen Soviet leaders. Treason and murder were the main charges. The list of defendants was larger than in any of the previous Moscow trials.

Pravda, communist party organ, said the accused would "pay dearly" for the life of Maxim Gorky, the famous writer, Vyacheslav Menzhinskiy, once head of the secret police, and Valerian V. Kibishoff, chief of the first five-year plan.

The deaths of these three, previously laid to natural causes, were, in part, the basis of charges of a treason-plot on which the 21 will be tried before a military tribunal.

Implies Poisoning

Izvestia, the government organ, said "nothing and nobody will save them." Implying that Gorky had been poisoned, Izvestia used the metaphor: "The snake's bite was fatal to the lion."

The chief editor, the famous former editor, Bucharin, three prominent physicians, and five former cabinet members were included in the group, accused of crimes.

Among the accusations were: Conspiring with foreign powers to dismember the Soviet union, plotting to assassinate Lenin and Stalin, arranging the assassination of Sergei Kiroff, and putting to death three men.

Although officials failed to make such an announcement, it was assumed that the defendants, who al-

Austrian Army Averts Nazi Uprising at Graz, Bars March on Vienna

Government Acts to Maintain Peace And Order

REACH 'ARMISTICE' Stern Measures Taken To Combat Nazi Hysteria

Graz, Austria — (AP)—An incipient Nazi uprising was smothered today by the alert Austrian army.

Swift reinforcement of the Graz garrison frustrated an enthusiastic Nazi scheme to seize control of the city and march on Vienna.

This Syrian metropolis, a hotbed of nazism, was turned into an armed camp as the government forcibly expressed its determination to maintain peace and order.

Sixteen tanks rolled into the city. Squadrons of warplanes concentrated at Thalerhof airport, ready for instant takeoff. Artillery was emplaced in commanding positions and machine guns covered highways leading into the city. The infantry garrison was strengthened.

In the face of this stern government move, the Nazis temporarily abandoned their plans and announced that a "two-day armistice" had been arranged with the government.

Planned Vienna March

During the "armistice" period, Nazi leaders said they would negotiate for more freedom of action.

Armin Dardieu, one of the Nazi leaders, disclosed that plans had been made for 50,000 men to start the march on Vienna from Graz. He said they were to have been joined by 8,000 from Leopold, 5,000 from Leibnitz, 2,000 from Lienz and smaller detachments from villages throughout the province of Styria.

But the government's stern military threat slashed cold water on the march, at least temporarily.

Police tightened control inside the city, where Nazi fervor during the last few days assumed the magnitude of community hysteria.

Schools Closed

No more than two persons were permitted to stand together on the streets. Schools were closed because authorities feared instructors were entering classrooms with "Hitler" greetings to pupils.

Police patrols were circulating through the cafes, silencing the forbidden "Horst Wessel" song, a Nazi anthem. Swastika flags were hauled down.

Nevertheless, "Heil Hitler" greetings were still passed on the streets and almost everyone was wearing swastika badges.

Although disorder was prevented by the government's speedy military action, the situation remained dangerous.

The government, at five-minute intervals, gave the people radio reports on developments.

Nazi leaders ordered temporary cessation of demonstrations during the two-day "armistice" period.

Hope for Compromise

It appeared that the Nazis were hoping for some compromise which would enable them to make a national demonstration of such proportions that Vienna, which has not been touched to any great extent by the waves of Nazi sentiment sweeping the provinces, would be influenced.

The Nazis invited Arthur Seyss-Inquart, newly-appointed minister of the interior, to come to Graz. They promised to show him 60,000 uniformed Nazis. Seyss-Inquart was appointed during the recent Austrian government crisis, with approval of German Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

In Vienna, it was said that officials had not decided whether to send the interior minister "to reason with the Nazis."

Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, while not alarmed by the Graz situation, indicated to fatherland front leaders that he regarded it as serious.

"He is the difficult times ahead," he said. "We must keep our nerve and observe rigid discipline."

Wisconsin Labor Ruling Reversed In Supreme Court

Eastern U. S. District Tribunal Exceeded Jurisdiction, Decision

Washington — (AP)—The supreme court failed today to deliver an opinion on litigation involving constitutionality of the 1935 act regulating public utility holding companies. The decision may come next Monday or later.

Washington — (AP)—The supreme court ruled today that a federal district court in Wisconsin had exceeded its jurisdiction in enjoining a labor organization from picketing a business establishment which claimed it was at peace with its employees.

Directly at issue was the right of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America to picket five Milwaukee stores operated by E. G. Shinner and Company, Inc.

Justice Roberts delivered the opinion that reversed rulings by the Eastern Wisconsin federal district court and the Seventh circuit court of appeals granting an injunction against the picketing.

The conflict centered around whether there was a "labor dispute." It said its employees were not on strike and were satisfied with existing conditions.

The union asserted there was a labor dispute. It said it was picketing the stores in an effort to compel the corporation to recognize the labor organization as the collective bargaining agent of the corporation's employees.

Exceeded Jurisdiction

"The district court," Roberts said, "made none of the required findings save as to irreparable injury and lack of remedy at law. It follows that in issuing the injunction it exceeded its jurisdiction."

"Since the courts below were of opinion that a labor dispute, as defined by state and federal statutes, had not been shown, they did not pass on the questions of the legality, under the Wisconsin law, of the acts charged to have been done by the employees."

Seeks Free Hand In Negotiating for Return of His Son

New York Attorney Assured Authorities Won't Interfere

New York — (AP)—Murray Levine, father of Peter Levine, 12-year-old New Rochelle, N. Y., schoolboy who has been missing since last Thursday, said today he had received promises from federal and Westchester county authorities that he could negotiate without any interference "with those who may be holding my boy."

Levine declined to state whether he had definite information his son had been kidnapped, nor would he pass on a report that $60,000 ransom had been demanded.

"I can say nothing now," he said huskily, in a voice near to breaking, "I must have a completely free hand to save my boy."

The father, a well-to-do New York attorney with offices on Fifth avenue, first called in New Rochelle police and then sought the aid of the federal bureau of investigation after his boy disappeared.

Peter was last seen returning to his home from school in New Rochelle Thursday.

Levine addressed an appeal to newspapers, the public and his friends not to attempt to communicate with him by telephone at his home so that he might have complete liberty to deal with the abductors.

Sought Secrecy

In his statement, the father explained that he had "made every effort to keep this from the public because of my desire to do everything I humanly can to meet the demands of those who may be holding my boy."

"The authorities, local (Westchester county) and federal, have promised me that I am to be permitted to negotiate for and accomplish the return of my son without any interference on their part," he continued.

"Those who may be holding my boy can safely deal with me. Particularly good newspapers to refrain from having their representatives telephone my home or congregate in the vicinity. Until I have had a reasonable opportunity to work this out, I shall give no further information."

"I also beg my friends and the public to leave my home and telephone alone. All people of decent sentiment will understand and respect my wishes."

While Levine himself refused to comment, a New Rochelle police officer said a note demanding $60,000 ransom had been received.

Samples of Peter's handwriting were compared under a microscope with the handwriting of the note.

Czerwinski and Lemanski, Zblewski testified, took no part in the actual robbery.

The witness testified Lepinski gave him $150 as his share of the loot, and later this $150 disappeared.

Saturday afternoon William John, cashier of the bank, testified on the course of the robbery and the identity of the bandits.

A jury verdict late Saturday gave Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mayhew, Knapp, Wis., $7,000 damages incident upon the death of their son, Ralph, in a motorcycle automobile accident at Hammond, Wis., Sept. 11. Defendants were Frank DeVoe, Minneapolis, and the Phoenix Indemnity company.

State to Appeal Decision Setting Aside Rate Cuts

Commission's Order Reducing Telephone Charges Held Illegal

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau)
Madison — The celebrated rate fight between the Wisconsin Telephone company and the Wisconsin public service commission, which has a pocket-book interest of almost $5,000,000 to $50,000 Wisconsin telephone subscribers, today was certainly headed toward the state supreme court, and possibly the United States high tribunal, for final decision.

Still smarting under the scorching chastisement of Circuit Judge August C. Hoppmann, the state public service commission today prepared to carry its case to the state's highest court immediately.

In quiet Dane county circuit courtroom Saturday afternoon, austere Judge Hoppmann announced that he had finished the formidable job of studying 15,000 pages of testimony and thousands of pages of statistical exhibits in the rate case, and declared that the commission's rate reduction orders have been illegal since first begun in 1932.

In warm words the judge enjoined the commission from enforcing "unlawful and unreasonable" rate reduction orders amounting to $4-

Bringing Applicant, Job And Employer Together Is Task of Employment Service

Means Difference Of $20,000 a Year To Subscribers Here

Madison—Illustrating the importance of the Wisconsin Telephone Company case is the estimate by the public service commission that if the final rate order of the commission, made in 1936 and calling for a permanent $853,000 reduction, had been sustained, Appleton rates would have decreased $20,000 a year.

Green Bay telephone rates have been cut $31,000 a year, Kaukauna $2,000, Manitowish $12,000, Oshkosh $20,000, De Pere $3,000, and Neenah-Menasha $11,000.

$780,275 and a permanent annual reduction of $853,000, and for its alleged unfairness in utility regulation procedure.

Cost $1,500,000
Thus ended the first lap of a battle which began six years ago, before the existence of the present public service commission, which has cost to date more than $1,500,000, borne entirely by the company, and which ranks among the first half dozen utility cases in American history in financial importance.

The judge ordered restored to the company the sum of $478,275, which was set aside as a "kitty" for use in customer refunds in the event the commission's rate reductions were upheld. A 60 day period was granted to the state, however, for an appeal to a higher court.

Judge's decision covered two of four orders a temporary order in 1934 and a permanent cut in 1936. Two others are now in federal court as the result of a company appeal. The first of the latter, issued four years ago, demanded a 12 1/2 per cent reduction in Wisconsin rates, or about $1,750,000 for that year. A similar order was issued in 1934 for another year.

In 1934 the commission ordered a one year cut of 10 per cent, and in the final order in 1936, the state set the company's property valuation for rate-making purposes at $35,000,000. This estimate the judge set aside in his decision Saturday, declaring that the rate base should be $51,000,000 to give fair consideration to the company's going value.

Started 1931
The contested orders date back to 1931, when the public service commission was still called the rate of public utility commission, and when its members were Theodore Kronslage of Milwaukee, chairman, and since deceased, David E. Lilienthal, now head of the federal TVA, and Andrew MacDonald, Kaukauna, now resigned.

Present commissioners are Fred S. H. chairman, N. Floyd Green, and Robert A. Nixon.

The historic case began with an application by the company, in 1930, for authority to declare a 25 per cent increase in its Madison rates. Beginning an investigation on the need for such an increase, the commission, reorganized the next year, made the study state-wide. Since then the investigations, hearings, appeals have gone on month by month, the total cost running up to $500,000 for the state, which, however, was assessed back to the company under state law. The company, in its defense, has spent about $1,000,000, it is estimated.

Lack of Fairness
According to Judge Hoppmann, the commission's orders were unfair and "confiscatory," and he added that the company, through denial of fair hearings, had been deprived of due process of law.

The judge found:
"That the acts of the commission in the conduct of its proceedings before it, and the orders made in the proceedings, evidenced manifest unfairness, bias and a lack of judicial attitude on the part of the commission against the plaintiff."

Like a clinic that diagnoses its patients and then sets about curing them, the Wisconsin State Employment Service, of which the Appleton office is an important unit, classifies workers according to their fields, aiming to find places for them in industry.

Not only the person who is out of work but the employer who needs men for certain jobs is aided by the service. It is not a casual task the W. S. E. S. has undertaken, but one that requires care and efficiency in method and training in personnel.

The Appleton office, which covers Outagamie, Waupaca, and Shawano counties, had 3,338 persons in its active file at the end of last week, 2,870 of them men and 968 women. Each man and woman whose name is found in office files was interviewed personally before his or her card was filled out.

Interviewing applicants for jobs, re-interviewing them, getting their work history, making calls on employers, and bringing employer, applicant, and job together are duties of the Appleton office and the 23 other district offices in the state.

"We are not in competition with personnel departments of various industries," F. R. Gehrke, manager, says. "We're an addition to them if they care to use us."

Six on Staff
Gehrke has six persons on his staff, all civil service employees. The W. S. E. S. is a division of the state industrial commission and affiliated with the United States Employment Service.

If an ordinary business office had as many callers in one day as the W. S. E. S. has, its workers would think their company was sponsoring a sight-seeing tour. On Monday, Feb. 14, for example, 365 persons visited the Appleton employment office.

That 365 persons called at the office in one day doesn't mean that 365 new unemployed suddenly rose up in the three counties. There are reasons for frequent visitations.

When an unemployed man or woman seeking work goes to the W. S. E. S. office for help for the first time, he is interviewed and his work history recorded. He is then placed in the "active" file. To remain in that file, he must report to the office either personally, by before the hearings at which such evidence was offered.

"That substantially all of the final order, and the prior temporary rate orders, were drafted by members of the staff of the commission, which members had been investigators and witnesses on behalf of the commission and against the plaintiff on the same subjects with which they respectively dealt in writing such orders."

"That no commissioner attended all of the hearings and frequently successive hearings were presided over by different commissioners. That none of the commissioners examined all of the evidence in the proceedings prior to the issuance of the final order."

"That the plaintiff repeatedly requested and was by the commission denied information as to the nature of contemplated orders, including the final order, and upon what grounds were proposed and what field was to be covered by them, as well as what changes were contemplated in the expense and investment data which were contained in the books of the plaintiff."

Hire Propagandist
The judge scored the commission for hiring a propagandist to present the commission's side of the controversy through the newspapers, and wrote that one hearing, which he called a "fiasco," "has no parallel in the history of judicial or quasi-judicial proceedings. The action so thoroughly condemns itself in the minds of right-thinking persons that no written words can add to its self-condemnation."

"The judge held that the commission's orders were not fully informed, and that therefore the company had not had the benefit of due process of law."

Tolls for long distance telephone service were not involved in the litigation. It was pointed out, although the commission and the company had disagreed on how much of the toll plant should be allocated to the rate base.

The court sustained the commission's finding that 7.4 per cent of the toll plant be allocated, adding that if the company wants an increase in long distance rates it can apply for one. The commission's finding of 3.41 per cent as a proper charge against earnings for depreciation of property was also sustained. The company wanted 4.52 per cent.

phone or by mail, at least once monthly, more often if he wishes. By seeing an applicant frequently, the office keeps in close enough touch with him so that when an opportunity for placement arrives, he is quickly reached.

Compensation Cases
The Appleton office of the state employment service also deals with compensation, asking unemployed persons, asking unemployment compensation, a person must be on the active unemployment file, indicating his willingness to work.

And while he is receiving compensation, he must report weekly.

The interview which a member of the office staff holds with the applicant is needed to obtain the information which goes on the card. The interviewer finds out the person's age, where he lives, and what kind of work he does, whether he is in the class of professional, technical, skilled, semi-skilled, or untrained workers.

How can an interviewer know if an applicant is, for example, a competent carpenter?

In the first place, the W. S. E. S. has learned that generally it can depend on a person's honesty. Besides, if the man is given a job, his ability is soon determined.

Generally Honest
"For the most part, they're honest about it," Gehrke says. "But we have ways of checking on them. Our interviewers make it a business to know considerable about what is demanded in various jobs and also are equipped with questionnaires regarding them."

The questionnaires are contained in occupational research booklets which are being compiled by the United States Employment Service. Ultimately, all employment offices, state and national, will have material in every type of work, which they can use in quizzing applicants. The Appleton office has booklets on the building trades, automotive, and laundry industries. Its library is steadily being enlarged. In time, it will have 200 different volumes.

An applicant must report monthly to stay in the active file, the one to which the office refers when trying to fit a worker into a job. If the applicant neglects this regulation, his card goes into the "inactive" file. It remains there one year. During that time, he may have it renewed and returned to the active classification. If he does not, it falls into the "obsolete" category at the year's end. After another year, if nothing more has been heard of him, it is destroyed.

When a man or woman obtains work lasting less than a week, his or her card remains active. If the employment extends over a week, the card goes into the "inactive" file, and his inability to swallow food."

At that time, 8:30 p. m. (11:30 p. m. E. S. T.) the general was having longer periods of consciousness. Rheumatism was no longer a factor. He appeared weaker, however, and his blood pressure was lower.

Friends Hopeful
This bulletin and the general's appearance caused a surge of optimism among friends and relatives.

"He won't be going back on a funeral train at all," said Sergeant C. C. Shaeffer, the general's orderly for 17 years. "He'll get over this. But he'll never be a well man."

The doctors said they were continuing treatment which had been decided upon several days earlier. This included heart stimulants, administration of oxygen and intravenous feeding.

Thursday night the 77-year-old war chief of the American armies lapsed into a coma. Twenty-four hours later he was placed in an oxygen tent and the doctors said he was sinking rapidly.

Several times he rallied briefly, reacting to heart stimulants, but failure of his kidneys to function brought on uremic poisoning in "considerable magnitude."

Stock Exchange Expert to Talk At Meeting Here

Chamber, Service Clubs Will Hear Westerfield Next Monday Noon

Jason Westerfield, a special representative of the New York stock exchange, will speak at the third joint meeting of the city's service clubs and the chamber of commerce next Monday noon at the Conway hotel.

Westerfield, a graduate engineer, has been associated with the stock exchange for the last 20 years and is intimately acquainted with all its departments. Before he became affiliated with the exchange, he was in the automotive and aviation industries. The subject of his talk will be "The Stock Exchange from Within."

His experience in both industry and finance equip him to show the relationship between the two and to explain the interdependence existing between production and distribution of goods and the functioning of finance machinery.

The forum meeting will be under the supervision of the chamber of commerce forum committee, of which Dr. Carl Neidhold is chairman. Two previous meetings have been held. At the first, President Clarence A. Dykstra of the University of Wisconsin made his first appearance in Appleton and at the second, President Thomas N. Barrows of Lawrence college was principal speaker.

Lions, Kiwanis, Rotary, and Exchange clubs cooperate with the chamber of commerce in staging the forum meetings.

employment compensation bureau, the Appleton office operates a teachers' placement system. Unemployed teachers may file their application through the office here and have their credentials sent to the main office at Madison. There a confidential file, carrying the teacher's references, and record, is made up.

When a vacancy occurs in a school system, the superintendent may notify his nearest W. S. E. S. office which in turn notifies the Madison headquarters. The folios of teachers most likely to meet the requirements are sent to the superintendent. From them he may decide whom he wishes to see personally.

State and national unemployment offices over the entire nation cooperate in finding the right people for the right jobs, according to Gehrke.

"We've even had inquiries come into this office for high salaried jobs. A firm in Illinois some time ago used the employment service in hunting for a technician whom, if he was capable to fill the job, they offered to pay $10,000 a year. Last spring a fellow who runs a big truck farm north of here came down and told me he wanted to find two Japanese families who could live on his farm and help work it. We agreed to help him and sent inquiries to the Pacific coast and to other western states. We weren't successful in hiring two Japanese families for work in Wisconsin, but our offices did their best and would try to fill similar requests."

Senate and House Groups Disagree On Relief Issue

ably there is more interest in it than in anything else we have up."

Questions of unemployment relief and taxation were tied together before the senate's unemployment committee by Bernhard Baruch, New York financier, who blamed government policy for the present condition of business affairs.

He said employment could not be expected to increase until a feeling of security among business men ended the "millions of cautions" which have held back private spending despite cash credit resources.

Two southern Democrats completed weeks of meticulous preparation today to lead opposing senate forces in the fight over a major administration issue—President Roosevelt's request for authority to reorganize the executive branch of the government.

The measure was on the calendar for consolidation this afternoon, but there was a possibility debate might be interrupted for a vote on the bill to appropriate $1,400,000 for the treasury and post office departments.

Senator James F. Byrnes, 58-year-old South Carolinian, directing the campaign to enact the reorganization program, said reorganization of the 135 federal bureaus had become an economic necessity.

Determined not to let the bill pass without modification, however, was 50-year-old Senator Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia, whose ideas for reorganization differ greatly from those of the administration.

Both Given Support
Both men had substantial backing. Lined up with Byrd were many of the same senators, including Burke (D-Neb.) and Wheeler (D-Mont.), who successfully fought President Roosevelt's court bill last year.

Byrnes was counting on the normally predominant administration strength in the senate to pass the bill after two or three weeks' debate. During the Hoover administration,

Forum to Discuss Visiting Nurses Program Tonight

Two Neenah Women Will Be Speakers at Meeting in High School

The Appleton Forum will hold its third meeting tonight to discuss the question of whether Appleton should have a visiting nurses association.

Two Neenah women, Mrs. Donald Shepherd and Miss Lydia Bourassa, will be speakers at the meeting which will open at 7:30 in the high school auditorium.

Mrs. Shepherd is chairman of the women's auxiliary committee of the Visiting Nurses association in Neenah-Menasha and Miss Bourassa is supervisor of the staff of nurses.

The proposal to establish a similar program here has been discussed in smaller groups before but never brought up at a public gathering. Persons interested in the question are welcome to attend tonight's meeting, hear explanations of how the association operates in Neenah-Menasha, and express their opinions on the advisability of adopting a similar plan here, forum officers announced.

The Rev. John B. Hanna of the First Congregational church will preside at tonight's meeting. Dr. J. B. MacLaren is president of the forum. Under rules which have been set up, a person is limited to three minutes in speaking during the open forum discussion. After he is finished, he may not speak again until all others have had a voice or none other wishes to be heard.

000,000 to $10,000,000 would have to be spent at each of a half dozen navy yards.

Late Entry in Race
Since the United States is a late entry in the world armaments race, the projected increases are expected to leave the strength of the army and navy at its present relation to the forces of other nations.

As for the army, Secretary Woodring said in his annual report that despite advances in mechanization and efficiency, it was "relatively weaker, compared with the armies of the other great countries, than it was a year ago."

The first 13,000 annual increase in the enlisted reserve force proposed by the administration would boost the army's net total of trained men to 500,519—just beyond the 497,000 of Argentina.

Senator Wheeler said a similar bill received committee approval.

While the pending measure would give the president authority to realign federal bureaus before July 1, 1940, it would not permit him to touch 15 independent agencies, such as the interstate commerce commission.

Senator Wheeler said he would demand that any reorganization changes planned by the president be approved by congress.

The house ways and means committee virtually completed action on another major problem—the new tax bill. The house may begin debate Thursday. In the meantime, the house was considering the interior department appropriation bill.

Face Firing Squad
In view of the accusations, which the government declares have been substantiated, death before a firing squad was considered a matter of days for most, if not all, the defendants.

Most prominent among the 21 were former Premier Alexis I. Rykoff, who succeeded Lenin and held office for nearly two years; and Bucharin.

Next in order were the five former cabinet ministers: Genrik G. Yagoda, once head of the secret police; Gregory F. Grinko, former finance commissar; Vladimir I. Ivanoff, former chief of the timber industry; A. P. Rosengoltz, once commissar of foreign trade, and M. A. Chernoff, former commissar of agriculture.

They figured largely in the charge, made against the entire group, that they had plotted to overthrow the soviet regime by terrorism with the aid of foreign powers which would grab rich areas of the soviet empire as a reward.

Dr. L. G. Levin, head of the Kremlin hospital; Dr. D. D. Pletnyeff, famous soviet heart specialist; and Dr. I. N. Kazawoff, head of a large clinic, were accused of the deaths of Gorky, Menzhinsky and Kibishoff.

391 High School Senior Students To be Graduated

With 391 seniors expecting diplomas in June, the total of 5,280 students will have been graduated from Appleton High school since its construction in 1904, according to H. H. Heible, principal.

This year's senior group will be the last to graduate from the old school as classes in 1938-39 will be held in the new building now under construction. Commencement will be held June 2 at Lawrence Memorial chapel.

So far this year only 30 pupils have dropped out of high school as compared to an average of about 85 pupils per year since 1904. Up to this year 4,889 pupils have been graduated while 2,919 have dropped before graduation.

Federal Aid to the Schools

On Wednesday the President sent a message to Congress, and with it a report dealing with the subject of enlarged Federal grants to the states for the improvement of the schools. The grants would begin at 70 millions a year from this coming July, and would rise to about 200 millions in the course of six years. If we take 2,000 millions as the sum now being spent in the states on elementary and secondary education, the present proposal, at its maximum, would mean a Federal contribution of an additional 10 per cent.

Seek To Equalize Educational Opportunity

The main object of the proposal is frankly to do something toward equalizing educational opportunity as between the richer and the poorer states, and more particularly as between the rural sections of the poorer states and the rest of the country. At the end of the six-year period about 70 per cent of the fund would be devoted to general aid apportioned according to the needs of the states. The balance of the fund would be used for some help in constructing buildings to consolidate rural schools, for the improvement of the training of teachers, for libraries and adult education. There is also a small, though very desirable, grant of 3 millions for educational research and experimentation.

This Federal aid, it should be understood, would be in addition to the 54 millions or so that are now paid out for vocational training and to the land-grant colleges. It is in addition, also, to the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration.

Decentralizing Of Authority Is Necessary

The first question which naturally arises is whether this proposal is another invasion of home rule by the Federal government. In strict principle it is not. For the Federal government has for many years been helping to subsidize agricultural colleges, and the general idea of Federal action to promote education is just about as old as the Republic itself. Nevertheless, the grant of considerable subsidies to the ordinary elementary and secondary schools is a rather different thing from subsidies to agricultural colleges. It could, if it were not properly safeguarded, involve the Federal government in the business of determining what shall be taught in the schools, and on the principle that if it pays the bill, it can call the tune, it might ultimately give the Federal government a central control over education.

This is every reason to think that the President and his committee, which, by the way, is both expert and widely representative, are aware of this problem. Thus, for example, they note that even today "too much Federal control is now exerted" and they recommend that "the states should be authorized to determine for themselves what educational activities are to be deemed 'vocational.'" Such decentralization of authority would be still more necessary in making grants for elementary and secondary schools. For, otherwise, the Federal government will find itself entangled in all sorts of issues that must be kept local, such as the support of parochial schools and the educational opportunities of Negroes.

Should Be Issued With Few Strings Attached

If the money is to be given, it should be given to the states with as few strings attached as possible. Except that it should be stipulated, I think, that no state should use the Federal money to relieve the local taxpayers, that the money must be regarded as added to local funds, the spending of the money should be left to the good sense and the good faith of the states. It would be better to give the subsidy freely and rely upon their honor than to attempt to write an elaborate contract with them, followed by supervision and even inspection.

Democratic Peoples Are Willing To Aid Schools

Assuming that this fundamental question of local autonomy is carefully safeguarded, the other question of principle is whether the people as a whole should be taxed in order to give the poorer parts of the country more nearly equal school facilities. My own view is that they should be, that no real question can be raised against the soundness of the principle of taxing the more well-to-do to provide more equal opportunity for the less well-to-do.

The great difference between the Federal aid to elementary education is the best way by which something can be done to equalize the opportunities of those who happen to be born in the poorer regions of the country. The proposal should, I believe, have general support,—always with the proviso that the legislation itself should be carefully scrutinized, to see that there are no jokers in it which give to Federal officials any right of interference in the control of education by the states.

To be sure, this is another project to spend money. But it is not a lot of money, and, moreover, that are two imperable reasons why this particular money for this particular purpose should be voted now. The first is that, if we can afford to spend 20 per cent more on the national defense, it would sit better with us if we spent 10 per cent more on education. The other reason is that, in a time of depression and general discouragement, it is good for the spirit to take a positive action of this sort, based on faith in the long future of the American democracy.

Labor Building Association to Elect Officers

Decision on Course of Program May Be Made at First Meeting

The Appleton Labor Temple association, organized to finance the purchase or erection of a building for use by union labor, will elect directors and officers at a meeting tomorrow night in the Salvation Army building.

The association was formed to supervise the program for new or improved headquarters for the Appleton Trades and Labor council, the Building Trades council, and affiliated unions. The program was launched last December when it became apparent that accommodations in the present second-floor hall on College avenue were inadequate.

Besides electing directors and officers at tomorrow night's meeting, the association will discuss its program. Officials indicated today that it is possible a decision on whether a new temple will be erected or a building purchased will be made at the meeting.

Mike Steinhauer is temporary president of the association and Earl Clark temporary secretary. Other members are Carl Smith, Harry Shafer, Herman Heling, Willie Retza, August Witke, Charles Debeck, Harold Douglas, Henry Barte, and John C. Douglas.

The total membership in the unions make up the Trades and Labor council now exceeds 3,000. Two other halls besides the College avenue headquarters are being used by the unions for their meetings. There are 33 unions and four councils that convene regularly.

Twenty unions in the general council already have started funds for a new or improved labor center.

Motorists Warned to Drive Carefully Because Of Icy Spots

State trunk highways in Wisconsin are in fair to good condition for winter travel, according to a report released Friday by the state highway commission and received by F. R. Appleton, Outagamie county highway commissioner.

The following detours are in effect: Dodge county, State Trunk Highway 109, Hustisford-Woodland road; Marinette county, United States Highway 141, Crivitz-Amburg road; Vilas county, United States Highway 45, Eagle River-Conover road.

Roads in the county are in good condition, it was reported today. There are some icy spots as a result of the alternate melting and freezing temperatures each day. Some town roads also are a bit rough for traveling as a result of the temperature changes.

The petitioners or the constitutionality of that law in legalizing any of such acts. As the case must go back for further proceedings, we express no opinion upon these questions.

Justices Cardozo and Reed did not participate in the decision. Justice Butler delivered a dissenting opinion in which Justice McReynolds joined.

The supreme court sustained orders of the national labor relations board directing two bus companies to withdraw recognition for collective bargaining purposes from labor organizations they were alleged to have formed and dominated.

Government attorneys studied the decision closely to ascertain its effect upon what the labor board described as "company-dominated" unions.

In an opinion delivered by Justice Stone, the tribunal reversed rulings by federal circuit courts holding that the board orders were not authorized by the national labor relations act.

The orders were directed against the Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, Inc., and the Pacific Greyhound Lines, Inc. They contended that when the board acted, no elections had been held to determine whether the employees wished to represent them in collective bargaining, and that it was unfair to "discriminate" against unions of company employees.

Justices Cardozo and Reed did not participate in the decision.

Justice Stone, in the Pennsylvania case, asserted that "there was ample basis for its (the board's) conclusion that withdrawal of recognition of the association by respondents, accompanied by suitable publicity, was an appropriate way to give effect to the policy of the act."

Japanese Report Linfen Captured; Chinese Retreat

Other Places Fall as Nipponese Advance 40 Miles in Two Days

Shanghai — (AP) — A Japanese army driving southward through Shansi province at the western end of the great central China front reported today it had captured Linfen and driven the Chinese defenders in a route toward the Yellow river.

Linfen has been provisional capital of the province since the Japanese captured Taiyuan, the capital, 130 miles to the northeast, three months ago.

The reported fall of Linfen indicated the Japanese had driven some 40 miles in two days since smashing the Chinese resistance center at Lingshih. Enroute the invaders took Hwolsien and Chaocheng in heavy fighting.

This drive apparently was aimed at the great bend of the Yellow river, where Shansi, Shensi and Honan provinces join. Just south of the bend lies Tungkwan, vital station on the Lunghai railway and gateway to Shensi, stronghold of the bitterly anti-Japanese Chinese communists.

The Japanese reported they killed or captured 5,000 Chinese at Hwolsien alone.

Chinese Holding Own
East of Shansi in other sectors of the corridor held by China's armies along the Lunghai the Chinese were firmly holding their own against the widely-extended Japanese forces.

The Chinese air forces carried the war to the enemy today, bombing Japanese concentrations at many points along the north bank of the Yellow river where the Japanese were preparing to attempt crossings.

In Shanghai the new Japanese commander for central China, General Shunroku Hata, paid a call on Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, aboard the admiral's temporary flagship, the yacht Isabel. General Hata has recalled General Iwane Matsui, recalled to Japan.

It was learned authoritatively today that Madame Chiang Kai-Shek is planning to relinquish command of China's air force.

The reason for her impending resignation, reliable sources indicated, would be the great strain wartime duties have placed on her health. Her successor has not been named.

Government Policy Responsible for Unemployment, Senate Committee Told

Washington — (AP) — Bernard Baruch, New York financier, told a senate committee today that government policy was more responsible for unemployment than anything else.

"I say it with regret, but I would be less than candid if I failed to express my opinion that unemployment is now traceable more directly to government business than anything business could or should do," said the white-haired Baruch, a personal friend of President Roosevelt and sometimes consulted by the chief executive on economic questions.

Baruch testified before the senate committee on unemployment. He recommended enactment of wage-hour legislation which he said "seems to me a necessity of our times" but criticized some other administration policies, particularly the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes.

These taxes, he said, "practically arrest" the creation and expansion of new industries.

Ample Credit Available
He said that there is ample credit now to support much greater business activity than that of even 1929 and added:

"The single missing element in a great forward movement is a feeling of security — a belief that money can be spent or invested without confiscation of reasonable profits by inordinate taxation. . . . Arbitrary change in the value of money . . . further disturbing assaults on business."

"The combination of millions of cautions" caused by doubts about the trend of government, he said, has held back private spending.

"Of course," he said, "all this depends on national policy."

"If it remains what recently it has appeared to be, there is no hope of re-employment and substantial recovery."

Mercury Rises Under Warm Sun

Milder Temperatures Tonight and Tomorrow In City, Vicinity

A bright sun drove the thermometer steadily upward today after a brisk night and gave cause for a forecast of rising temperatures tonight and tomorrow in this vicinity.

Standing at 11 above at 7 o'clock this morning, the mercury rose to 29 by noon today. The sky was summer-like in its appearance.

For the 24-hour period ending at 9 o'clock this morning the warmest temperature recorded in the city was 34, according to charts at the Wisconsin Michigan Power company plant. Only the extreme northwest section of Wisconsin will not enjoy warmer temperatures tonight and tomorrow, the Milwaukee weather bureau reported.

Shreveport, with 78, and Sault Ste. Marie, with eight below, were the hottest and coldest spots respectively in the nation yesterday, the Associated Press reported.

Dispute Delays Notices To Precinct Appointees

Notices have not been sent to election board appointees because of a decision pending in the supreme court on the dispute among major political parties over the right to name precinct officials for this year's election.

The supreme court Feb. 15 agreed to take jurisdiction in the case after Attorney General O. S. Loomis ruled that clerks and inspectors must be appointed on the basis of the vote for governor instead of president. Democrats want appointments based on the vote for president.

Judge Werner Hearing Test Case on Sale of Vegetable Spread

The department of agriculture and markets' suit charging the I. D. Segal Produce company, Appleton, with selling oleomargarine without a proper license and without paying the tax required by the state laws opened in circuit court before Judge Edgar V. Werner this morning.

The trial originally was set for Feb. 14, but was postponed until today. The suit, which is being tried as a test case, has attracted statewide attention.

The state department is endeavoring to prove that a vegetable spread sold by the Segal company is made of substances which make it oleomargarine, and for that reason the oleo license and tax should be paid.

A warning was issued recently by the department that persons selling the vegetable spread should keep accurate records of their sales of that product pending the outcome of the suit. If the case is decided in favor of the state, persons possessing records showing the amount of spread they have sold will be prepared to pay the tax due on all sales of the product, plus the penalty for non-payment and failure to render quarterly reports, it was pointed out by F. Schultheiss, department commissioner.

HEALTH THROUGH CHIROPRACTIC

Question: What percentage of your patients are benefited through Chiropractic? — K.R.M.

Answer: If the patient stays with me until I have accomplished the essential or necessary changes in the spine, the results will be approximately ninety percent. I am speaking of cases that were experimented on by other methods and failed to regain their health and as the last resort turned to Chiropractic.

Question: I am a man forty years of age. I seem to be all run down and tired. Will Chiropractic help me? — H.B.

Answer: The man is as old as his spine. When the spine has impinged nerves and impaired body function, the victim becomes old long before his time. When all mankind knows about and takes Chiropractic the span of human life will be materially lengthened. That's why Chiropractic is being so widely accepted. The reports of patients right here in your own community is rather good proof. A large number of people, many of whom you know, who came to our Clinic and have been restored to health, should be very good evidence that your case is no different.

Question: I have frequent headaches. Will Chiropractic help me? — Mrs. R.A.L.

Answer: Now that we know why we have pains such as headaches, etc., let us suggest something about relief from them. Pain and suffering, whether it be headaches or otherwise, to a skilled practitioner means that there is an interrupted bodily function to be located. The science of Chiropractic will correct the cause of your headaches. For your health: app. phone 4319W.

MEXICO BACKS UP ON A MOSCOW IDEA

Mexico adopted something of the extreme socialist code when it fixed twenty years in prison as the maximum punishment for murder. The idea is borrowed from Moscow as part of the ideology that the wrongs inflicted upon either a person or property are as nothing in comparison to the wrongs that may be inflicted upon social theories whose violation is the only offense that merits the death penalty.

But socialist theories that sound so well as men talk across a board stained with beer work out poorly when theory is abandoned for practice.

Note the case at Tia Juana, a town whose name means "Aunt Jane," though if anyone ever had an aunt so sour looking and bedeviled they would hide her back of the silo.

A Tia Juana resident attacked and slew an eight year old girl. He was apprehended. The common people of Tia Juana considered a twenty year sentence for such an offense something like a drop of rain in the ocean. They arose in their might and tipped over the beer tables. They even assaulted the army and started burning government buildings. It is easy enough to lull people to sleep when one croons some of these beautiful lullabies concerning the rights of men but a twenty year sentence and the sadly broken body of an innocent child just do not make sense whether one has been educated in school or makes a cross for his signature.

So the socialist government of Mexico retreated. And its retreat was a sort of burlesque frame-up. It resorted to what it calls the "ley fuga" or the law of the fugitive which is simply that a fugitive may be shot. So it became necessary to make a fugitive of the killer, and even if he didn't care to be a fugitive. The way the show was staged indicates how little attention is paid to law in a socialist state when necessity must be met.

It was planned to take the killer to a cemetery. The Los Angeles reporters were there ahead of him. A crowd of several hundred local citizens had likewise preceded him. The army even knew where he was to become a fugitive since they had half a company of soldiers planted in the same cemetery.

The jail was opened. The killer who didn't want to become a fugitive was dragged out and put in a car. Other cars full of soldiers followed, bent, of course, upon preventing (sic) the escape of the prisoner. When the cemetery was reached the killer wouldn't get out of his car. He didn't think much of the fugitive business. He was dragged out. He was kicked and cuffed to make him run. He was even shown the direction in which he must flee. Finally he ran. And then he was slain.

In this instance we not only have a good example of socialist reasoning in violent opposition to human experience and which the people will not tolerate, and you find that such a country ceases to be a nation of laws and becomes a nation of men, that is to say principles are adopted or abandoned for the sake of argument but the day's events are solved entirely by the standard of their appeal and irrespective of consistency.

FROM THE HORSE AND BUGGY DAYS OR WORSE

Washington wrote:
"Disorder and miseries greatly incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of one individual, and sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this disposition to the purpose of his own elevation, on the ruins of public liberty."

The first President also sent out this carefully prepared message to the American people:

"Towards the preservation of your government it is requisite that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretenses. In all the changes to which you may be invited remember that experience is the surest standard by which to test the regular tendency of the existing constitution of a country."

These statements may be at least cited and dwelt upon from the standpoint of curiosity. Otherwise in this shining and brilliant age, they will be placed back upon the dusty shelf along with hoop-skirts and other evidences of antiquity.

For Washington didn't even belong to the Horse and Buggy Age. He was part and parcel of the Saddle and Stirrup Age. Today we don't exactly denounce the man for writing as he did because no doubt his intentions were good enough, but we put his stuff aside with an indulgent smile wondering how it must have seemed to live among such old fossils

A BAFLED FATHER

The other night, in one of our large cities, a young man held up several taxi drivers. He wasn't very good at it. Caught, he explained that he was penniless and had a baby who needed milk. He had tried to get work, without success. He had pawned his coat to buy food. At last he felt desperate and unjustly treated and set out to take by violence what he thought the world owed him.

A wave of sympathy followed publication of the story. A trucking company gave him a job. Generous people fed his hungry family and gave them needed supplies.

The young man, however, was in the hands of the law. His case came before a judge who believed that wrong was wrong, no matter what the provocation. "I will not glorify anybody who goes out robbing with a gun," he said, shocking many people and setting them to thinking. "Did you ask the taxi drivers if their babies needed milk?"

The judge refused to consider probation for this first offender and set his bail at $2,000, an impossible sum for him to raise. In jail, he could not go to work at the job he had been given. A jury trial, with a lot of hokum and an uncertain outcome is still ahead.

Unfortunately it is not an unusual story. But what a mess of wrong thinking, wrong acting, social injustice, human shortsightedness, judicial rigidity and general unintelligence it all comes to!

PURPOSE OF LEARNING

Helen Keller, most famous of the world's blind people since Homer, seems to see with surprising clearness what is going on in the world, and what it needs. She writes in a letter to a college publication:

"Let us remember to include among our standards the highest truth—that human welfare is the only ultimate goal, the sole justification for the immense enthusiasm and the great sacrifices laid upon the altar of learning. Civilization expands or collapses as we foster or neglect the central ideal—to multiply the blessings and lessen the calamities of mankind."

"The momentous need to which all our present problems point is to gather all philosophies, ethics and knowledge into a Science of Man. Is not this the highest scholarship, which shall bring peace, sanity and healing to a fear-driven, bewildered world?"

Dr. Alexis Carrel who wrote the great book, "Man the Unknown," would agree with Miss Keller about this. So would the great eighteenth century poet Pope, who said "The proper study of mankind is Man." What human knowledge is for is mainly to make human life more worth living. It would be a wonderful thing if all the boys and girls going to college could start with this idea and hold to it.

INCOME PARADOX

Workers who were fortunate enough to have full employment in 1937, the Brookings Institution reports, enjoyed a higher real income and more leisure than in 1929. But there were eight or nine million workers without jobs, and they brought down the average real income (income in relation to cost of living) 15 per cent below that of 1929.

The real income of farmers and some wage groups was higher and hourly wages in many industries were above 1929 averages. Again, weekly earnings in manufacturing during the first part of 1937 were only 6.5 per cent lower than the 1929 average, while living costs were down 16 per cent.

These pleasing figures show only a part of the picture. The other details include the many wholly unemployed and the many on short or irregular working schedules that make annual incomes low even though hourly wages are high.

Does not the country need to think more in terms of increased production and adequate annual income?

ELIGIBILITY RULES

Because of their failure to meet scholastic requirements, several Big Ten athletes are ineligible for the remainder of the year. The list includes the captain and one of the high scorers of the Illinois team, one of the Northwestern players, nearly a dozen at Iowa and five at Indiana university. Iowa's list is not confined to basketball, and reflects time lost in football practice and trips made away from the campus last fall. Application of the rule at Indiana took the basketball team's regular center out of the lineup a few minutes prior to the game at West Lafayette between Indiana and Purdue.

The rules were not made by any of the schools; they are a part of the Big Ten standards, providing that if an athlete fails in one hour of work, he becomes ineligible. The institutions agreed to this ruling and must abide by it. The Indiana Daily Student says that strict enforcement amounts to a penalty for answering the call to play basketball and suggests that fellow students of the ineligible may fail in five hours of work and "go right ahead with their program of extracurricular activities, if they wish, just as if nothing had happened."

If the athletic program is to be subordinated to regular class work, reasonable scholastic standards will have to be maintained. However, something may be said for the students who, if they have athletic ability, are impetuous to go out for some competitive sport. Many of them are the means of adding thousands of dollars to the income of the schools for which they play. Occasionally their schedules take them to New York, New England, or to the west coast. Obviously, if they must practice regularly and play through a season of competition, they lack the same chance to keep up their school work that others have. The uni-

APPLETON POST-CRESCENT

I'VE OFTEN WONDERED . . . why people crossing intersections so often wait for one car to pass and then step boldly out without looking again — figuring that they've done their duty . . . why the letters you so often anticipate are the last ones to arrive . . . how it happened that the president insisted on battleships when, in the Spanish war a while back, a ship was sunk by aerial bombs after the experts had informed us it couldn't be done . . . (answer: the president just adores ships) . . . particularly when 500 bombers can be built for the cost of one battleship . . . and can be built in less time than a battleship — or am I taking in too much territory? . . . how Jim Farley feels about his patronage job slipping steadily over to young Jimmy Roosevelt, the Assistant President of the United States who was never elected to the office by the American people . . . odd, isn't it, that a vice-president is never trained to assist the president and be really prepared, in the case of an emergency, to step in and adequately carry on? . . . or, in the case of the Monarchy of the United States, maybe Crown Prince James automatically steps into the job, permitting Jack Garner to go back to Uvalde, Texas, and resume fishing . . .

A guy by the name of Thomas has signed up to fight Joe Louis. Ho hum.
Well, you can't blame the Louis handlers for wanting to make money on Joe's training schedule, but it seems just a little bit unjust.

General Pershing may not be alive by the time this gets into print, but I'm going to repeat a joking remark credited to him the other day after a nurse had administered a hypodermic.
"She's just as mean as ever, isn't she?"

Add remarks I liked: that made by Jim Marshall, writer covering affairs in China, after being brought home, still weak from illness, to the effect that the way to fix up the Orient would be to submerge it under the Pacific, raise it up again and start over with two monkeys.

The gag about professional football players having to take cuts in salaries after leaving college seems to have suffered a bit by the news that Clark Hinkle turned down a nice assistant coaching job to stay at Green Bay where he can make more money.

However, we will now be deluged with stories from the spring training camps around the baseball circuit coupled with announcements from various managers telling how they figure the pennant races will turn out. Maybe one of 'em was right once, I don't remember. Anyway, if Joe McCarthy of the Yanks wants to be frank, he could probably figure it out with more than reasonable accuracy.

At least in the American league.

Yeah — the Yanks followed by seven other clubs.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

WELCOME, SPRING RAIN

Welcome, Spring Rain, upon the earth!
Wash all our winter grief away;
Quicken the glory of rebirth,
Hasten the blossoming of May!

Wash out the rivers of red blood!
Straighten the grass on trampled ground!
Bring back our hope of brotherhood!
Shut out the cannon's dreadful sound!

Spring Rain, revive the aching soul,
From greed and hate, bring swift release!
Then may our prayers ascend to God,
Borne on the cleansing winds of Peace!

TATOO MARKS

Cause of birth mark, nevus, is unknown. It is silly to imagine such blemishes are due to any real or fancied prenatal impression or happening or shock.

In nearly all cases the cosmetic appearance may be much improved by one or another surgical treatment. In some cases the birth mark may be completely obliterated.

Among the surgical methods employed by physician skin specialists skilled in this field are the electric needle, carbon dioxide snow, the pointed cautery, electro-desiccation, electro-coagulation, X-ray, cold quartz lamp ultraviolet ray, fulguration (sparkling with high frequency current, radium, excision with autogenous skin grafting (covering the defect with bits of the patient's own skin), skillful cauterization with trichloroacetic acid, and sometimes chemical tattooing.

The earlier in life a birth mark is treated the better the cosmetic result is likely to be. As soon as the infant is evidently thriving the treatment of the blemish should be undertaken. Faint marks may fade in the course of several months if left alone, but if there is actual pigmentation or thickening or evident enlargement of blood vessels in the nevus, it is not likely to disappear spontaneously.

Tattooing for other than legitimate surgical purpose should be regarded as a crime and both the "artist" and the weak-winded victim should be punished. In order to impress upon the public the viciousness of such mutilation of the skin, if of small area, may be removed by chemical tattooing, or by electrolysis. An effective method, for small tattoo marks, is to tattoo in a solution of tannic acid, then rub vigorously over the surface with a silver nitrate (lunar caustic) pencil and allow this to act for several minutes until the surface becomes black from the formation of silver tannate in the skin.

In a few days an inflammatory reaction occurs and a dark adherent crust forms. There is no pain after the third or fourth day except that caused by movement. After two weeks the crust comes off spontaneously, leaving a pink cicatrix which gradually becomes normal in color. A month or two later the scar is hardly noticeable.

In this or any similar treatment of birthmark or tattoo mark the importance of asepsis is as great as it is in any surgical operation. The patient must beware of submitting to treatment at the hands of the unqualified.

Application of an ointment of the following composition is an effective, the painful way of removing small tattoo marks:
Pyrogallol, acid, Salicylic acid, Resorcinol, of each, 70 grains.
Glycerin, Dilute Alcohol, of each 50 drops, Tricagethan, 10 grains.

Apply to the mark only (protect surrounding skin with zinc ointment) and let remain, under bandage, 24 hours. Then remove — the epidermis comes away now. Then another application, left on for 48 hours. Rarely is a third application necessary. Slough comes away in about a week, followed by granulation and healing.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — If important men in this country would let down their hair on important occasions instead of becoming solemn, there would be a big time in this town on March 3.

On that night the Department of Labor is celebrating its 25th anniversary and among the guests and sponsors of the affair are dozens of persons who have been at each other's throats industrially and verbally days without end.

Topping the speaking program is William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. John L. Lewis, chairman of CIO, was invited to speak and become like Green, a "sponsor" of the celebration but he turned it down cold and told Madam Secretary Perkins he would be out of town that night. Technically Lewis is "out of town" every night he spends at home, for he lives in Alexandria, across the Potomac river from Washington.

Sponsors Are Many

Invitations were sent to more than 400 persons to attend the banquet at the Mayflower, swank Washington hostelry, and to become "sponsors" of the affair. Our information is that all those who were invited to be "sponsors" were automatically listed as such unless they followed Lewis' example and declined the privilege. The result is that the program includes 232 "sponsors." In that list are found sources of much antagonism.

The sponsors are listed alphabetically on the program and fourth from the top is Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the social security board, while at the bottom of the first column is Abraham Epstein, who writes some of the most critical articles about the social security board.

Members of the labor relations board, headed by J. Warren Madden, were not invited to become sponsors, nor even to attend the banquet but an official of the labor department insisted that had "no significance whatever." The two agencies once were quite bitter but are less so now. The department official said sponsors were chosen to represent labor, industry, and the people. The list, he said, included former officials of the department but no active officials of other departments of the government. "We had to stop somewhere," he insisted.

Although Altmeyer is active chairman of the social security board he was once assistant to Secretary Perkins, so comes in as a former official. J. P. Biggers, Illinois glass manufacturer, whose plant was one of the first involved in the CIO strikes a year ago, is a sponsor. As a member of the business advisory council, Biggers is in submitting to the president a critical report on the Wagner labor act creating the labor board. Listed with him now as a sponsor is Senator Wagner of New York, author of the act.

girls who want to come to New York for theatrical careers," he says. "They write me letters and describe their aspirations and ask me to help them. Yet, for all the shows I put on and the revues I create it is rare that I can use one. Their experience is too limited. To get here they must travel hundreds of miles for a job that already has applicants a dozen deep. And girls with more experience."

"Are all those letters from girls wanting careers on Broadway?" I asked this man who has just returned from a highly laudatory trek along the Broadways of Europe. Over there they call him a "czar of beauty."

"Yes," he said, "all of them, and more come by every mail. Take one, any one, and read it." He pushed the tray towards my side of the table.

"The stack of letters was a foot high. I chose one at random, a letter postmarked from the little town of Elyria, Ohio, and this is what it said:

"Dear Mr. Hale: As I have the opportunity to come to New York within the next two or three weeks, I am writing to ask your opinion as to whether or not it would be advantageous at this time."

"I have had some experience as a dancer and would like to be a chorus girl in New York City. I am 19 years old, weigh 116 pounds, height 5 feet, four one-half inches without shoes; hair, light auburn; dark eyes; fair complexion."

"Since good looks are one of the requirements in this line of work, I believe I can be understood when I claim to be good looking."

"Thank you for your consideration and I shall be waiting for a reply from you."

That is the pity of it, the reply that all too often doesn't come, and even when it does, as it always does from Hale, it is apt to be the end of a make-believe dream.

to find merriment a cure-all for many complaints.

If a woman and March 1 is your birthday, your demeanor must receive your careful consideration because your bearing will influence the attitude many people will maintain towards you. You have it in your own power to create a good impression on the average person you contact. You have a right to expect a great deal of good fortune, for Fate appears to have made adequate arrangements to assure you of many opportunities to free yourself from any possible financial worries. Courage is the principal mainstay you need before success crowns your efforts. By appearing overly critical this day you can give much offense, to exercise the greatest amount of tact in both your social and business intercourse. Through music, singing, entertaining, selling, teaching or work of a literary nature you may find yourself sitting on the topmost rung of the ladder of success. Your matrimonial life appears to depend upon the degree of wisdom you exercise in both the selection of your husband and your management of your home.

The child born on March 1, generally has an unusual capacity for affection, and requires a lot of attention. This youngster might have many dormant talents, which only encouragement and development can make into valuable assets.

If a man and March 1 is your natal day, you are probably mentally alert, have many worthy aspirations, and have sufficient ability, if you exert it, to make anything you undertake, possible.

Seen And Heard In New York

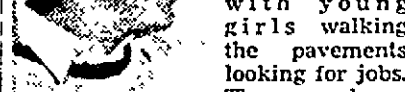

BY GEORGE TUCKER

New York—It is a pity that so many talented and pretty girls are doomed to disappointment and defeat on Broadway. But the endless supply for a very limited demand has built up a situation that is hopeless and in some respects downright tragic.

Broadway today is filled with young girls walking the pavements looking for jobs. They can dance and sing. They are slender and pretty. But the jobs aren't there.

What's New at the Library

A fascinating countryside which still retains all the mellow charm and tradition of the last two centuries have given it the focal point of the new book, "Old Williamsburg and Her Neighbors" by William O. Stevens. Beginning with the venerable town of Fredericksburg, rich in memories of both Revolutionary and Civil wars, the book takes the reader down the Rappahannock, rambles along both banks of the James among the old river mansions, and visits the sites of Jamestown, Yorktown and Williamsburg itself.

What has happened in 300 years to bring music in America from discordant restricted psalmody to a freedom which admits jazz as a legitimate tool in serious music is told in "From Jachowas to Jazz" by Helen L. Kaufman. The book also relates something of those who took part in this drama of progress, what forces altered its course and many other interesting items about church music, symphony, opera, art songs and instrumental music in America.

Stephen Leacock who insists that humor has an enormous influence on our national life and politics has compiled a volume entitled "The Greatest Pages of American Humor." The selections range from Benjamin Franklin, Washington Irving and Petroleum V. Nasby to Ring Lardner and Bob Benchley.

"Make Life Worth Living," by Joseph R. Sisco is based on the author's long experience in dealing with the personal religious problems and questions of people from all walks of life. He is vice president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The author of "The Village Carpenter," Walter Rose, writes of village carpentry as it was practiced in Buckinghamshire by his family and their men in Victorian times. Himself a master carpenter and the son and grandson of master carpenters, he covers all wood-working except wheelwright's work. The photographs illustrating the book were taken in and about Mr. Rose's native district.

Six of Irving S. Cobb's most famous books which most people will want to read over and over again are contained in "Irving Cobb at His Best." These works are "Speaking of Operations," "Eating in Two or Three Languages," "The Life of the Party," "A Plea for Old Cap Collier," "One Third-Off," and "The Young Nuts of America."

"Plays for Spring and Summer Holidays" selected by A. P. Sanford is composed of 15 plays suitable for the various spring and summer holidays such as Easter, Arbor day, May day and St. Patrick's day. The plays are of various lengths and designed for children from 6 to 16.

"Healthful Living" by Harold S. Diehl, M.D., is among the new books at the library. Its author is professor of preventive medicine and public health and dean of the medical sciences at the University of Minnesota.

Over 2,000 illustrations which cover Western art from the prehistoric period to the present are contained in "An Illustrated Handbook of Art History" by Frank J. Roos, Jr. It includes Egyptian, Mesopotamian, Early Aegean, Greek, Roman, Early Christian and Byzantine, Renaissance, Gothic, Flemish, Spanish, German, Dutch, English, French, American and modern art.

"The Art of German Cooking and Baking" by Mrs. Lina Meier presents a variety of authentic German recipes that have been handed down from generation to generation as priceless heirlooms.

PLENTY DENTAL WORK
Chicago—There are enough cavities in the teeth of the American people to keep the country's 60,000 dentists busy for 100 years, Dr. Haldee Weeks of New Orleans told delegates to the Chicago Dental Society's convention.

To which the doctor added that the missing link between all this potential business and the dentist is educating the people to take the cavities to the dental chair.

Sherwood Eddy has collaborated with Kirby Page for a new book entitled "Creative Pioneers," in which the authors scout the argument that there is no real challenge to youth because there is no frontier left for pioneering. The authors outline the current trends and obstacles to be conquered on frontiers of industrial relations, politics, the cooperative movement, race relations and socialized religion.

IT'S ODD But It's Science

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor
New York — Rumor, looking for a Jules Verne victim, has picked on Einstein.

The story spread in France and England, "Einstein," its printed version reads, "is planning a daring experiment of descending into the deepest parts of the Pacific shortly in a special apparatus he already has constructed. The scientist hopes with stones and other material he will find there to obtain data for a new book on the history of the world."

Einstein's associates here said they were sure no geological work was contemplated and they suggested the submarine device might have been invented earlier in Einstein's career.

The story apparently arose from recent interest of geologists in the bottoms of the oceans. Interest was inspired by the fact that a new device enables them to drill fair sized cores out of the sea bottom a mile or more down. With these rocks they are trying to solve the origin of submarine canyons.

The canyons are like those made by service rivers. Another possible source of the rumors is Otis Barton's projected dioprobenth. This is to be a bathysphere, or steel ball, on wheels, to go down one mile, and be rolled along for some scientific sight-seeing.

The deepest parts of the Pacific are miles below anything man can now reach. At Everest, in one of those Pacific "deeps" would be far submerged.

All-Stars to Play At Menasha Gym

Oshkosh Squad Will Meet Colored Team at New School March 7

Menasha — The Oshkosh All-Stars champions of the Western division of the National Professional Basketball league, will play the New York Renaissance, world's colored basketball champion, in the new Menasha High school gymnasium on Monday, March 7, under the sponsorship of the Menasha Lions club, according to M. F. Crowley, chairman of the Lions committee. Arrangements were completed by the club this morning with Lonnie Darling, manager of the Oshkosh team.

The game will be a third of the series of six being played between the two teams throughout the state. The Oshkosh team won the series between the two teams last year.

Popular request following the game between the All Stars and the Kautsky team here at Butte last night's gymnasium Feb. 13 resulted in the club arranging this game, Crowley said. While several hundred were turned away at that time because the gymnasium was too small, the seating capacity at the new gymnasium is over 1,700.

Ticket sale will be started by the club tomorrow. Tickets again will be placed on sale at Appleton, Neenah and Menasha business places. Reserved seat tickets will sell for $1 while general admission will be 75 cents for adults and 50 cents for children.

Recirculating Air Ducts
This duct is connected to Return Air Grilles in the rooms and carries the air into the unit to be conditioned.

Clean, purified air is the advantage of air conditioning. Every few minutes all air passes through these filters which remove dust, germs, bacteria and pollen.

Silent Blower
This powerful blower forces the conditioned air to every room, under pressure, providing cooling ventilation in hot weather.

There's a big difference in winter between a hot house, and a house that is a healthful place in which to live; as much difference as there is between the burning, dry Equator and the balmy, invigorating climate of Palm Beach. Any heating plant will heat a house. Only a modern Air Conditioning System can produce a healthful atmosphere in a house. Theaters, department stores, office buildings, and some of the finest mansions are Air Conditioned because heat alone does not satisfy their requirements.

But, until the development of the Sunbeam Air Conditioning Unit, residential Air Conditioning, because of cost, could be purchased only by the wealthy classes. Now it is available to every one who can afford a central heating system. In replacing a warm air heating system, we generally use the old pipes and registers. Study the construction of the Sunbeam and read about the many advantages which it offers you.

WHEN the Clare Tree Major Children's theater comes to Appleton tomorrow to present "The Captive Maid of Old Carlisle" at 3 o'clock in the afternoon at Lawrence Memorial chapel, the audience will find an old friend in the principal character, Regina Hartman, played by Jewel Morse. Miss Morse will be remembered by Appleton children as the princess in "Sleeping Beauty" and in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and as Beth in "Little Women."

Michael Tabard who plays the part of Conrad Kurtz appeared as Prince Thorvald in "Snow White" and Jane Cleveland who appears as Mrs. Hartman, Regina's mother, played the part of Queen Haldine in that production.

Another member of the cast, Lone Bear or Chief Kuruks Pahitu, who is the Medicine Man in "Captive Maid," this year returned to the Clare Tree Major company after an absence of three years during which time he appeared on Broadway in "Russet Mantle" and more recently in the Theater Guild production, "To Quito and Back." He has been broadcasting weekly over NBC and Columbia in "Cavalcade" and "Death Valley Days." He is a graduate of Ohio State University and Dennison college and has posed for a number of known Indian statues. Upon the death of his father, he will become titular chief of the Pawnee tribe.

"Captive Maid of Old Carlisle" is a play that adults as well as children will enjoy thoroughly for the story is based on history and is presented in such a manner as to be interesting to grown-ups and still retain all the flavor of a children's production. The scene for the first act is the main room of the Hartman log cabin near Grangsville in eastern Pennsylvania a morning in 1764. For the second act the exterior of the hut of She-lack-la is shown in the camp of the Iroquois Indians in northern New York about three weeks later, and the second scene of this act shows the same place nine years later. The public square in Carlisle, Penn., in 1763, is the setting for the third act.

U. S. 'Economic Machine Stalled,' Frank Tells Party Calls for 'Sweeping Re-Education in Political Realities'

Chicago—(AP)—Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican committee on program, declared today the nation's "economic machine is stalled" and called for a "sweeping re-education of the nation in political and economic realities."

"An alert and statesmanlike political opposition must see in this need one of its major obligations," the former president of the University of Wisconsin said in an address prepared for delivery before the committee at its first meeting.

"There is nothing but chaos and paralysis ahead for the national leadership unless the national leadership is guided by definite principles of government and human relationship to which it adheres with decision, certainty and consistency," Dr. Frank said.

Dr. Frank said the policy committee was "not a brain trust" or a group of yes-men to the national committee, but a body of "eloquent experts" but were a "body of payment intended to be representative of the basic interests of the mine-run of Americans."

Survey By States

The committee will, he said, "take soundings state by state" to determine just what the "rank and file" of men and women are thinking.

Calling its work two-fold, a factual research and a referendum, he said the referendum aspect "precludes the issuance of any tentative document of principles, policies, or program by this commission at this organization session."

Dr. Frank charged the committee, however, with these three specific tasks:

(1) "This commission must make an utterly honest and objective audit of the New Deal, beginning with March, 1933, and coming down to date."

(2) "This commission must re-think, restate and reinterpret to the nation the political and economic philosophy with which the Republican party faces the new circumstances of this new age."

(3) "This commission must, as its contribution to the councils of Republicanism, create a comprehensive report of policy respecting the long array of stubborn problems confronting us as a people—labor, agriculture, business, social security, taxation, political and economic foreign policy, unemployment and so on."

"Machine Is Stalled"

Speaking of the present administration's economic policies, Dr. Frank said:

"After five years of unprecedented assumption of federal authority over the nation's enterprise and five years of unprecedented prodigality of federal expenditure for the relief of distress and the restoration of employment, our economic machine is stalled and about the same number of millions of workless men and women haunt the council of statesmanship as haunted them five years ago."

Dr. Frank said the audit of the New Deal "must cover everything that has been a factor in the total impact of the New Deal on the lives and enterprises of the American people."

"We know that some things the New Deal has done have been things that should have been done long ago," he conceded. "We know that some things the New Deal has done have been miserable flops."

Need Fresh Statement

Commenting that the New Deal's "philosophy of government" had attracted the support of millions, Dr. Frank said:

"No alternative leadership is going to slip into power through indifference of the mass mind, no matter how disappointing the results of the New Deal finally prove."

"The Republican party owes a fresh statement of its political and economic philosophy to the people."

John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National committee, asserted today the work of the party's new committee on program

Television Broadcasts Await Standard Equipment

What's holding up television? It has been on its way for eight years or more, and isn't available to the public yet. To get a plain explanation of the television situation today, the AP Feature Service put an experienced reporter on the trail of the people who should know—technicians, communications executives, program experts. Here is what he found.

BY JACK STINNETT

New York—(AP)—Ask experts when television will emerge from the laboratories, and the answers will be evasive as a rent-dodger's promise. No one will deny that television is here. Neither will any predict a definite time when it will be released to the public.

Ask business men that question, and you may find a few who say: "When public demand cracks the whip, as it did when it wearied of silent movies, both science and the television industry will clear all existing hurdles."

Ask interested persons at random why television must continue crystallizing in test-tube studios, and you will get 100 different answers, but all boil down to one of these:

Indians Awaiting Court Decision on Hunting, Fishing Case Involves Rights to Fish Closed Lake Superior Waters

Hancock, Mich. — (AP)—Several thousand Chippewa Indians in Michigan and Wisconsin await today a United States Supreme court decision which may determine the red man's tribal hunting and fishing rights in this region and possibly clarify, as well, the status of Indians throughout the country.

The decision will be on the test case of George Cardinal versus the state of Michigan, involving the rights of Indians to fish the closed waters of Keweenaw bay, Lake Superior, according to Eugene Warren, L'Anse, Indian agent for the Chippewas and several other tribes. Cardinal pleaded innocent to charges of violating Michigan game laws when conservation men seized his fish nets in Keweenaw bay last spring. The bay has been closed to fishing, but Indians claim, under a treaty of 1854, the right to fish in Lake Superior waters as within the boundary of their reservation.

Reserved Rights

"I contend that the Indians have the right to fish, trap, and hunt within their reservation lands under the treaty," Warren said.

"In all treaties ever made between the white and Indian, the Indians might determine 'the future of your country.'"

He called attention to a part of the national committee's resolution directing the committee on program to "ascertain as fully as possible the various views held by the rank and file of the Republican party, its national and local leaders, including auxiliaries of men, women and youth."

STILL-CAMERA PHOTO These unretouched photographs show the detail held in television by the new 411-line transmitter.

1. Television is too costly and the financing hasn't been solved.

2. Television has stubbed its toe on certain technical difficulties, prime among which is a practical solution of a picture network.

3. Television promoters hesitate to launch an industry that may scrap radio receivers now in use.

4. There is a shortage of television program material and lack of knowledge of program production.

Ask C. W. Farrier, who coordinates and interprets all television activities for the National Broadcasting company, and he answers: "Those considerations (above) are partly true and partly false, but the dominant reason why television is withheld is rarely stated. It may be expressed in one word—standards."

And apparently it's true that if some leaders in television experimentation have their way, there will be no public television until it more nearly approaches perfection.

It is certain that television receivers must fit the transmitters as keys must fit locks, and any basic change in either necessitates change in the other.

Some of the big experimentalists (and they are supplying the money) insist the public must wait, and that it should wait, for absolute standardization of transmitting and receiving equipment, so that any receiver can tune in any transmitter. Such standardization is determined by regulations of the Federal Communications Commission.

Some dissenters, mostly business men in the entertainment or manufacturing fields, and radio editors say: "Bosh! Toss television into the public stream and let it sink or swim." Public interest and encouragement, scientific ingenuity, and plain American business shrewdness, they assert, will see that it swims.

And there the matter rests.

Dismiss Petitions for Changes in Services

Madison—(AP)—The public service commission dismissed today several petitions for changes in Milwaukee bus and street car service pending completion of a study of the transportation problem there.

Among the applications denied were:

Extension of either bus or car service on the Holton street line to industrial plants on N. Richards street.

Application of the Milwaukee Electric company to discontinue service on the Forest Home avenue bus line.

Petition of citizens to substitute buses for street car service on N. Farwell, E. Odgen and other streets. The company contended the substitution would cost around $600,000.

The commission ordered continuance of trial trial service on W. Oklahoma avenue from S. Forty-eighth and E. Sixth streets.

Over 500 Million Spent in Six Years For State's Needy

Survey Shows U. S. Supplied bulk of Public Welfare Funds

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau)

Madison—P. D. Flanner, director of the state public welfare department, today announced results of a two year study which shows that public welfare expenditures in Wisconsin by state, local, county and federal governments in the six year period from 1931 to 1936 amounted to more than $500,000,000.

A half billion dollars, it may be pointed out, is more than ten times the normal annual Wisconsin state budget, is at least ten times the total assessed valuation of all real property in the city of Appleton, and is sufficient, according to Appleton's 1937 budget, to run that city for the next 500 years.

According to Flanner's announcement, the total expenditure since the 1931 depression days has equaled $170 for every man, woman and child in Wisconsin, and was disbursed by hundreds of local agencies, and some two dozen state and federal units.

First Complete Study

Flanner emphasized that the term public welfare was narrowly construed to include only aid to destitute persons in need of public assistance. Governmental activities and expenditures intended primarily for education, vocational guidance, rehabilitation and correction or punishment of delinquents was not included, nor were the R.E.A., the resettlement program, the HOLC and similar federal agencies, since they do not furnish outright grants.

According to Flanner, his department's study is the first complete research into the financial end of public welfare work in Wisconsin ever published.

Here is the way the half billion public welfare dollars in Wisconsin were supplied: federal government,

Here is the way in which those dollars were spent from 1931 to 1936, and in general the way in which other dollars are being spent today: special work programs 51.7 per cent; relief 33.4 per cent; institutional care 8.8 per cent; categorical aids 5.4 per cent. The "categorical aids" include old age assistance, aid to dependent children, blind pensions, and soldiers and sailors relief.

Virtually all of the special work program expenditures, the public welfare department said, "were translated into public assets—roads, bridges, libraries, paintings, swimming pools, parks, reforestation,

Two Watches and Ring Stolen From Apartment

Two living apartments at 117 E. College avenue and the Appleton Beauty shop, 115 E. College avenue, were ransacked between 4 and 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, according to police. Two gold watches and a silet ring with a diamond setting were stolen from the Herbert Goldberg apartment where entrance was gained through a transom. The apartment of Mrs. Lydia Kolb and the beauty shop were ransacked but nothing was taken. Entrance was gained by forcing the locks on the doors. Police are investigating.

grade crossings—which will be of material use and advantage to Wisconsin communities during future years."

Tables prepared by the welfare department's statisticians show that of the total $501,843,214 spent during the six year period, the federal government supplied the lion's share, $315,780,345, the local governments, city and county, ranked second with $139,526,703, while the Wisconsin state government lagged far behind, with only $46,636,166, giving point to the frequent complaints from the League of Wisconsin Municipalities and the Wisconsin County Boards Association.

EMPIRE FOR A LADY

BY ALAN LEMAY

SYNOPSIS: Against his will, my uncle, James Clyde, has become rajah of Balingong with life and death power over savage Dyak tribes. These oppressed jungle-men were encouraged to revolt from the Malays by a young English girl, Christine Forrester. Christine visions civilization and a great empire here. I see life-long exile for Clyde and myself (Paul Thorne). But Christine needs our help and both Clyde and I are in love with her.

Chapter 31
Trouble From Two Quarters
I found myself work. A Dyak gentleman in need of a head for a marriage ceremony caught himself a wayfaring Chinaman, whom he promptly disorganized. I jumped up the river with five Tenyaling riflemen and caught the Dyak, Clyde fined him 14 baskets of rice and took away the head. During our first month I had seven more cases like that, and caught three. This accomplished little, but I was getting ready for something else. The Tenyaling would work for me now, and I always had more volunteer paramangmen than I could use. I was waiting for an outrage which would force me to teach them a lesson, and establish Clyde's prestige by means of suitable unfortunate happenings. Somebody had to be licked as an example, and I was anxious to get it over with.

Meantime Christine had moved into Balingong's plank-and-bamboo palace. For some time the Dyaks had worried a good deal over Clyde having no consort. After many attempts they had finally given up trying to sell him any Dyak girls, and had made him an outright gift of 18 or 20. When he put these aside in a separate house and never went near them, he was waited upon by a committee. They explained that they had never yet had a rajah without a rane, and they feared for the effect upon the rice crop. They simply must have a rane, or what would be the use of planting at all? Greatly amused, Christine seemed to welcome this excuse for overriding Clyde's opinion that she ought to stay on her ship.

Our daily affairs were further enlivened by the arrival of Rentongen. Definitely in our agreement with the Rajah Mantusen had been the concession by Clyde that a Malay Shah Bandar, to be named by Mantusen, should act as Clyde's assistant and adviser in tax assessing, revenue collecting, and general assistance and seizure. It was the last assistance we wanted, but we had to have him, because of course he was a necessary official link with Saramba -- and Mantusen's head spy. Now that the coast was safe, this official arrived, complete with staff, effects, and retinue, in four well manned bankans.

A Cherry Pirate
I will say for Rentongen that I have never seen a more presentable Malay. Though not as tall as Mantusen himself, he was well above the average Malay height, and carried himself with the balance, leisurely grace of the active fighter. In age he was probably 30, but his supple muscles were more like 18, and his face no more than 20. If I had not known Malays I would have said that his face was candid and friendly.

The first move of this cherry pirate was to have all of his belongings carried into the Rajah Clyde's house. He didn't want to be asked; Rentongen was, as we were to discover, strictly self-sustaining throughout. He inspected and passed Clyde's extension of the long-house, now nearly completed; and dropped the remark that he and his people would now have something to eat.

We ate. As we went through the long ceremonious silences necessary to eat.

NEW LONDON—Trailing behind the Bulldogs for three quarters, Appleton's Town Taxis went on a 20-point scoring spurge in the last period and humiliated Mike's Taverns, 40 to 22, in an Outagamie County league game at the Washington high school gym yesterday afternoon. The win gives the Taxis a monopoly on undefeated first place.

Clarence "Red" Ehke sparked the Appleton squad in the drive, scoring 11 of the 20 points after Ken Slattery, second spearhead, went out of the game on fouls at the opening of the quarter. Ehke had a total of 18 points, scoring six markers of each variety. Slattery earned 10 points in three quarters.

Ehke tipped in a bucket in the closing seconds of the third quarter to give the Taxis their first lead, 19 to 20. The Taverns were held to three free throws from then to the end.

Appleton's defense was slack and rough as the New London cagers broke through consistently to keep a fair lead throughout the three quarters, scoring nine of their 19 points on free throws. The situation was reversed in the last quarter as the Taverns fouled heavily, giving the visitors 10 opportunities from which they made 8.

Taverns Lead

The first half of the opening quarter was spent at the free throw line after Ehke swished a surprise bucket. Dobberstein converted one and Brown potted two while Slattery evened the score with another for 3-11. Brown pushed a rebound through the hoop and Krohn tipped in another to give the Taverns a good lead by 7 to 3. Slattery dribbled through for an Appleton marker but Dobberstein took a neat pass from Westphal and set the ball in to regain the margin as the period ended, 9 to 6.

A fast pace in the second quarter kept the score nearly in balance but the Taxis gained a 17-17 tie by half-time. Midway in the period they tied at 11-11 after Zimmerman, Slattery and Ehke scored and Westphal and McDermott counted on personals. Dobberstein raced in for a bucket, followed with a free throw, and McDermott sank a gift shot to forge ahead again 15 to 11. Elias sank a long shot to start the Taxis back and Ehke and Slattery tied again at 15-15 from the free throw line. A dribble shot by Ebert was nullified by Meyer with he counted two shots off a foul in the last 20 seconds.

The third period was confined to four attempts from the free throw line except for Ehke's last minute bucket. McDermott made one and missed one while Slattery and Dobberstein each succeeded. Both sides were consistent at the foul line, throughout the game, the Taxis missing but three and the Taverns five.

The game drew the best crowd to the high school gym on a Sunday afternoon this season. About 150 were present.

COMPANY D WINS

Kaukauna — Company D cagers of Appleton defeated Knights of Columbus, 36 to 29, to gain a 500 rating in Outagamie County league basketball standings at the high school gymnasium Sunday. The guardsmen stepped into a 9 to 5 lead at the end of the first quarter and increased their margin to 18 to 9 at the halfway mark. The Kaukauna squad rallied in the third period with 11 points while Company D scored 8.

Verbrick, who was forced from the game in the last 30 seconds because of four fouls, topped the invaders with seven buckets for 14 points while Bauers had three buckets and three gift shots for nine points. R. Berg paced the losers with five field goals for 10 points and N. Berg looped nine points on four baskets and a free throw.

Dance Troupe Leader Says He Could Save Expenses of Spring Training

BY GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—One of the more interesting physical specimens a person runs into on the brink of the baseball season is Ted Shawn, the pappy of the dance, who still is convinced he's in the most strenuous racket of them all.

It's a laugh to the veteran barefoot floor thumper—these kids of from 20 to 35 piling into Florida and other sunshine centers on a serious, expensive crusade to get themselves into condition to play a couple of hours of baseball some afternoons.

Now, if the diamond magnates would listen to the 47-year-old Ted, he could have them all that.

Former Athletes

"I would like to see one of these football or basketball stars try to stay with us for a week, unless I had given him the usual preliminary training," snorted the big fellow. "There's no sport that calls for anything like the stamina and muscular control, unless maybe it's boxing. A fighter like Joe Louis, though, brings himself up to the peak only two or three times a year. My boys must hold it almost twelve months of the year."

All of Shawn's supporting cast of eight young huskies are former college athletes. But they admit frankly that they didn't know what training was until Ted started cracking his whip. When they aren't on the road they practice eight and nine hours every day.

At 47, Shawn swears he can shake as fast a foot as ever. In appearance he is about 10 years younger, and still packs the same 195 pounds he started with. As a standing proposition, he would like to match stamina and muscular control with any athlete near his age.

In fact, Ted makes fast dancing sound like the fountain of youth. It's only when he digs into another favorite theme of his, the relation of dancing to various sports, that you begin getting fidgety. He thinks, for instance, that basketball is "pure dancing," and that a little practical terschore would make another Red Grange of many a run-of-the-mill halfback.

You may, of course, take that or leave it strictly alone.

Behind 12-3 at halftime, the Wings enhanced their offense and tightened their defense the last half to win the rally.

Schwerte was the spark plug of the rally, scoring high man of the game with seven field goals. Olsson turned in six points for the losers.

The Bluebirds, who were tied with Post for first place, went in to an undisputed lead, winning handily from the Fords, 29-15. The first half was close, but the Bluebirds turned on the pressure after intermission, scoring 14 points and holding the Fords to four. Block with four field goals and two charity tosses led the Bluebirds. Filtz's one goal and three free throws made him high man for the Fords.

With Bauers pushing in five field goals and three free throws, the Vikings beat the Buckeyes 26-14 and improved their standing in the league. Gertsch led the losers, hitting one basket and three free throws.

At 47, Shawn swears he can shake as fast a foot as ever. In appearance he is about 10 years younger, and still packs the same 195 pounds he started with. As a standing proposition, he would like to match stamina and muscular control with any athlete near his age.

In fact, Ted makes fast dancing sound like the fountain of youth. It's only when he digs into another favorite theme of his, the relation of dancing to various sports, that you begin getting fidgety. He thinks, for instance, that basketball is "pure dancing," and that a little practical terschore would make another Red Grange of many a run-of-the-mill halfback.

You may, of course, take that or leave it strictly alone.

Four Professional Mat
Champions on Thursday Night's Card

Menasha — Four professional mat champions will display their abilities at the grunt and groan match at S. A. Cook armory next Thursday evening under the sponsorship of William Erickson, sports promoter. Kay O'Connor, claimant of the woman's professional wrestling championship, will pull hair with Nell Donald in the 30 minute openers.

Nickie Gerber, Indianapolis, Ind. will put on his exhibition with Louie Kodrick, Peshigo, grunter. Gerber claims the middleweight championship of Indiana among his feats. The two will tangle in a two out of three fall with an hour time limit.

Two champions will clash in the wrestling bout. They are Duke Ruppenthal, Titerton, and Stan Pesek, Omaha. Ruppenthal campaigned in Canada for six weeks and came back claiming the middleweight championship of that territory. He also claims the championship of the state of Montana. Because of commission regulations he had to leave the bells signifying his championship in Montana and Canada.

Pesek was recently awarded the Wisconsin middleweight championship after a series of elimination bouts under the tutelage of the Tolle-Strahota combination at Milwaukee. Pesek has been asked to have his cup on display here. He has already successfully defended his title against Rowdy Poca of Kimberly at Milwaukee.

The bouts at the armory Thursday night will get under way at 8:30 with the doors scheduled to open at 7:30.

ROCKET WRESTLERS OVERPOWER MILWAUKEE MAT SQUAD

Emery Christianson, captain of Neenah's undefeated wrestling team, is shown above applying the difficult jackknife hold on Joseph Himmelmreich, Milwaukee, during the Neenah-Washington wrestling match Saturday afternoon at Roosevelt school gymnasium. Himmelmreich wriggled out of Christianson's hold, but the Neenah grappler won a decision. He had a 5-minute 51 second time advantage. Referee Randy Haase is shown to the left of the wrestler on his hand and knees. Neenah floored the Washington matmen, 29 to 15. It was the first time this season Washington had been defeated. Badger Boxers Whip Syracuse In Fast Scraps

University of Wisconsin Team Points for Louisiana State

MADISON—(P)—The University of Wisconsin boxing team, with two victories already safely tucked away, are pointing for its match with Louisiana State at Baton Rouge this coming Saturday.

Coach Johnny Walsh's Badgers won a clean cut 61 to 14 decision from the Eastern Intercollegiate champions, Syracuse, here Saturday night. About 11,000 spectators saw the matches. It was the largest crowd ever to witness a boxing match at Wisconsin.

Two technical knockouts featured the card. Omar Crocker, Wisconsin 135 pounds, put the finishing touches to Captain Fred Zuccard after 1:08 of the second round. A series of one-two punches, followed by a brace of powerful straight rights did the trick.

Fight Stopped
John Mastrella, Syracuse's eastern collegiate 145 pounder, lost, opened an old cut over Ray Chisholm's eye and the fight was stopped after :58 of the second stanza. Prior to the injury, Chisholm held the invader on even terms.

Captain Vito Schiro clinched the match for the Badgers with a victory over Robert Griffith, undefeated 165 pound visitor. Schiro was undefeated last year and has been victorious in both of his battles this season. Griffith, prior to Saturday night's encounter, was undefeated in collegiate boxing.

Summaries:
115 pounds: Art Walsh, Wisconsin outpointed Heinz Voight, Syracuse.

125 pounds: Jim Walsh, Wisconsin outpointed Doug Breckenridge, Syracuse.

135 pounds: Omar Crocker, Wisconsin, scored technical knockout over Fred Zuccard, Syracuse (1:08 of second round).

145 pounds: John Mastrella, Syracuse scored technical knockout over Ray Chisholm, Wisconsin; (:58 of second round).

155 pounds: Henry Strand, Wisconsin, outpointed Stanley Kishman, Syracuse.

165 pounds: Vito Schiro, Wisconsin outpointed Robert Griffith, Syracuse.

175 pounds: Truman Torgerson, Wisconsin and Norman Brown, Syracuse, drew.

Heavyweight: Elmer Dushek, Wisconsin, outpointed Boleslaw Bluski, Syracuse.

CHISHOLM OUT
Madison, Wis.—Coach Johnny Walsh, of the University of Wisconsin boxing team, announced today that he will replace Ray Chisholm, 145 pounder, when the Badgers meet Louisiana State at Baton Rouge Saturday night.

Chisholm had his eye laid open in a bout with John Mastrella of Syracuse last Saturday night and his wound will not be sufficiently healed for the LSU battle.

Crys, a hard swinging sophomore is a colorful fighter, who wades in with both fists flying. Chisholm is a far better boxer, but his substitute packs a "Sunday" punch in both hands.

Booster Teams Won't Initiate Pin Alleys

Chicago—(P)—The stars of the sport will be "on the spot" when the American Bowling Congress opens its 38th tournament at the Coliseum Thursday night.

The booster teams, the home-towners who average below 875 pins, usually are given the assignment of breaking in the shiny new alleys—a tough job as thousands of veterans know. This year the first teams to roll on the 40 new alleys will be the kingpins of the game, stars from Milwaukee, Chicago, and three other Illinois cities—Peoria, Elgin and Rockford.

And if they shoot scores good enough to win the $1,000 top prize in five man competition none of the other lineups of the record team entry 4,057 will begrudge them their success.

After the 40 regular division teams complete their turns, tournament officials and Chicago bowling leaders will participate in opening ceremonies.

In addition to the five-man record entry, records have been set for the doubles and singles. In the two man field there are 8,419 entries, with 17,436 competing in the solo event.

The tournament will run 48 days, with almost $200,000 in prize money to be awarded.

WINTER CASTING PRACTICE

By Harold Hollis

PERHAPS last summer while fishing your favorite trout stream you passed up a promising pool because of the difficulty of fishing it. Bushes and trees directly behind you made the success of the overhead cast problematical and rather than lose a fly (or after losing one) you went on.

Now, there is a cast that will take care of just such situations. It is known as the roll cast, and can be easily mastered with a little practice. Why not learn it this winter, and improve your casting technique generally?

I believe that a fisherman will learn more about casting in an hour's indoor practice than he will in many hours on a lake or stream. When we are fishing casting is only one of the many things that occupy our attention; in practice it is the center of interest and so great progress is made.

In most localities winter casting practice will have to be held indoors and for a majority of fishermen it will be a "dry land" proposition. A large room such as a gymnasium is essential and so a large fisherman is not likely to get very far. An organization such as a sportsman's club or fishing club, however, can usually make the necessary arrangements. Then, too, when one has congenial companions the game is more interesting and he gets the benefit of the advice and criticism of others. If the class is coached by an experienced fisherman the progress of the members should be very rapid.

As an example of how this sort of practice can help you let us take up the roll cast mentioned a moment ago. A wall two or three feet behind you takes the place of the trees and bushes that baffled you on the stream, a circle on the floor 30 feet away represents the fishing water. Obviously, you cannot reach the circle with an overhead cast, for the line will hit the wall on the back cast and lose its momentum.

The Roll Cast
To make the roll cast drop your tip a little behind you with the line hanging from it. Then snap it forward until it reaches the horizontal. The next will see the line to the desired spot without permitting it to go behind you. Practice for 15 minutes and narrow streams and brushy banks will hold no terrors for you.

Then there are the loop or curve casts that eliminate drag and permit the fly to float downstream ahead of the leader. They are not difficult to throw, but it takes much practice to learn how to control them. To throw a loop to the left bank when fishing upstream use a sidearm cast with considerable force behind it. To throw it to the right bank make a backhand cast or use your left hand. While you're about it do a little practice with your right hand. You'll be surprised to find what a useful accomplishment it is in fishing.

Don't however forget the basic cast, the overhead. A little drill on this cast will increase both your distance and accuracy. Try to get a high back cast and have a friend watch and criticize your form. It is a good plan to divide the class into groups, with one group casting and another coaching. It is difficult for a caster to judge his own form.

Bait casters can also benefit by such practice. It is advisable for them to use rubber casting weights or make casting weights of small bags of sand.

CHICAGO—(P)—Purdue's high scoring Boilermakers probably wouldn't plead guilty to a charge of being overconfident, but it's very likely they are looking five days ahead of their basketball battle with the Chicago Maroons tonight.

The Maroons, occupying the Western conference cellar, are not expected to stop the championship rush of the Boilermakers, current leaders of the conference pack with eight victories and two defeats. Purdue, logically, is more concerned with its game next Saturday night at Evanston with Northwestern's second place Wildcats.

Ohio State may simplify Purdue's problem tonight. The Buckeyes oppose Northwestern at Columbus and Ohio State, which lost early in the season to the Wildcats by one point, may upset the Arthur Longborg club, which has lost two games and won seven.

Purdue, with Jewell Young scoring 19 points to take over the conference leadership at 144 points in 10 games, trounced Indiana Saturday night 50 to 26 before 5,000 fans. Iowa jumped into fourth place by defeating Michigan 37 to 25 as Ben Stephens, brilliant forward, bagged 10 points.

Continuing its winning streak, Minnesota won its seventh straight game 38 to 27 at Chicago's expense, with the Gophers presenting a strong defense and a well balanced offense in which eight players contributed to the winning point total.

Wrens won two games from the Cardinals. W. Lucke shot a 208 game and 532 series and paced the Wrens while E. Palm cracked a 529 total and led the Cardinals.

Defer California Ski Meet Because of Rain

Los Angeles—(P)—The big ski carnival Los Angeles was going to hold Sunday in the Coliseum, with five snow machines providing the surface, had to be postponed because of rain.

The promoters had lined up 41 of the world's best ski jumpers and estimated that their snow machines would create an eight-foot drift at the base, graduating up to a four-inch covering at the take-off.

The machine was no match for Southern California's winter rainfall, however.

Fight Manager Barred By State Commission

Milwaukee—(P)—The Wisconsin State boxing commission Saturday ordered the indefinite suspension of George Ades, boxer's manager, on a charge that he indulged in ungentlemanly conduct at a boxing show in La Crosse Tuesday night.

Fred Saddy, acting commission secretary, said the suspension would "bar Ades not only in Wisconsin but in all other states governed by National Boxing association rules, in addition, Saddy said, boxers under contract to Ades cannot perform in those states.

Declining Eddie Jackson, Chicago, did not put forth his best efforts in a bout with Ades' boxer, Baby Face Broese, in the La Crosse show, the commission ordered Jackson suspended for one year.

The commission suspended the La Crosse boxing club, sponsor of the show, for 30 days. It was charged the club did not have contracts for the Jackson-Broese fight signed within the required time.

Four New London Junior Ski Riders Win Meet Honors

Tim Kellogg Loses First in Junior Class A Jumping By Tenth of Point

New London—Four of New London's five junior riders placed or took some record at a small neighborhood ski meet at Bestul's hill near Scandinavia yesterday afternoon. Thirty-six youthful riders competed on the 35-foot scaffold.

Tim Kellogg lost first place for junior class A riders by one-tenth of a point with leaps of 41 and 42 feet for second place. Delbert Otis made the longest standing jump of the day with a distance of 47 feet. He did well in competition but failed to place because of form. Tim lost out on his attempt for distance.

Arne Carlson made the longest standing jump among class B riders with a distance of 37 feet. Pat Kellogg placed third in class C and also leaped the farthest in his class with a mark of 32 feet. Glen Beckert, a beginner, gained valuable experience but was not good enough to place.

The previous Sunday at Iola the older boys, Tim Kellogg and Delbert Otis, made successful leaps of over 70 feet on the hill's 70-foot scaffold but their accomplishments were dwarfed by the performances of a large number of experienced riders who competed in the meet. Next Sunday the New London boys will ride in a junior meet at Wisconsin Rapids.

sary to my uncle's first council with Rentongen, I know that Clyde was trying to think of a diplomatic way to get the rascal out of his house before he settled down to live there. But this question never came up, because other matters much more serious appeared immediately.

We now learned that Clyde's concession as regarded the Shah Bandar had been somewhat misunderstood and exaggerated—himself by Rentongen or Mantusen. What Rentongen understood was that he was now in full charge of all taxations, extortions, frame-ups, and port levies—even the principal trade burglaries, notably the monopolies on salt and gunpowder.

From the revenue he collected he was to hold out the annuities for the Sultan of Saremha, the annuities for Mantusen, and a little something for himself and his people; the remainder was then to be turned over to Clyde to meet
